Conferees Approve D.C. Rent Curb Extension

Agree to 7-Month Continuation, With Additional Period Left to Congress

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Senate and House conferees agreed unanimously yesterday to extend District rent control at least through January 1, 1951.

Both houses must give final approval to the local rent measure, with the Senate acting first and probably today, before the measure goes to the White House.

The existing District rent act expires at midnight Friday.

Yesterday's joint action represents rejection of the Senate-passed plan for a six months' extension of local rent control, with an additional six months left to the discretion of the Commissioners.

Congress Must Act

As agreed to by the conferees, further extension of local rent control to June 31, 1951, must be voted by the next Congress before January 31—less than a month after it normally would convene.

Capitol observers saw acceptance of this 7-and-5-months formula as substantially reducing chances of continued controls beyond the January 31 deadline.

Even Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.), arch foe of national and local rent curbs, guessed last night the Commissioners would be more apt to extend control than Congress.

He also left no doubt in reporters' minds that he would oppose vigorously the conference committee report when it reaches the Senate floor.

'Immoral,' Says Cain

"I will make a strong presentation on my conviction that it is immoral," he said, "to provide more protection for ourselves than we have granted the rest of the country."

The national law extends rent control to December 31, with a

Air Mass Cools City; Further Relief Forecast

Cool and sunny weather with a high about 80 was forecast for the District today—thanks to a cool front from the midwest.

Arriving in Washington at 2:30 p. m. yesterday, the air mass promptly dropped temperatures from the day's high of 95 at 2:15 p. m. By early this morning, said the Weather Bureau, the thermometer should be in the low sixties.

With a second cool front massing north of the Dakotas, weather observers thought there was a good chance that the District might have cooler weather for several days.

One victim of the heat yesterday—second hottest day of the year—was Charles Gatter, 58, of 4102 Brandywine st. nw. An electrician working on the General Accounting Office building at 4th and G sts. nw., he collapsed and was treated for heat prostration at Casualty Hospital.

Good Friday Killer Guilty, Faces Chair

Sentencing Set Friday; Death Penalty Mandatory

William A. Tyler, jr., was convicted yesterday of the brutal Good Friday murders of two Lansburgh and Bro. department store watchmen.

A District Court jury of eight women and four men deliberated only 50 minutes before finding the 18-year-old youth guilty on two counts of first degree murder.

Death in the electric chair is mandatory.

Judge Alexander Holtzoff told the jurors they had "discharged their responsibilities well," and set Friday for sentencing.

Announcement Delayed

The jury began deliberations at 2:05 p. m. and announced that a verdict had been reached at 2:50. But at that time Judge Holtzoff was attending cornerstone-laying ceremonies at the new courthouse, and the verdict was not announced until 4:25.

Tyler was brought up from the cell-block, outwardly calm, but with his collar undone and beads of sweat forming on his forehead.

Twelve deputy United States marshals formed a ring around the convicted murderer as he stood to hear Foreman James Furr announce the verdict, and then listen to each juror say "guilty" twice when polled.

His mother and sister, in the courtroom during final arguments, were not present at the verdict.

Tyler was convicted of stabbing to death guards John Carpenter, 66, and Oliver R. Hess, 57, early Good Friday morning, April 7, after he had broken into the store with intent to rob.

The murders outraged the entire community and set off one of the most extensive manhunts in the history of the police department.

Tyler was arrested May 5 in connection with the yoke robbery of a southeast druggist, and was connected to the Lansburgh murders by an associate.

On May 6, Tyler signed a com-

Truman Gets Full Backing In Congress

House Applauds Reading of Text; GOP Critics in Senate Fall in

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Congress yesterday began to close ranks behind President Truman's decision to use American planes and warships to defend South Korea and Formosa.

There were a few scattered holdouts, but an overwhelming majority of legislators on and off the floor backed the President's stand.

In the Senate, Republican Senators most critical of the Administration's former policies in the Far East were the first to pledge their support.

House Applauds

Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) broke the news to the Senate.

"This is a time for action and not too many words," he said. "This is a time for all Americans to forget their differences."

The handful of complaints that were voiced questioned mainly the President's right under the Constitution and the United Nations charter to move without action by Congress.

But majority sentiment quickly crystallized in support of the move. House passage of a greatly strengthened draft bill, by a vote of 314 to 4, was viewed as a showdown test. The Senate responded by agreeing to vote on the draft at 2 p. m. today.

Earnest appeals by Senate Foreifn Relations Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.), Lucas and others failed, however, to produce an im-

Prince Georges Population Is About 170,000

The preliminary 1950 census total for Prince Georges County is going to top the Montgomery County figure, it was learned last night.

Montgomery's total was announced last week as 163,829, a 95 percent jump in a decade. Prince Georges officials have been estimating the county's total at 175,000 to 180,000, but the figure is reported to be in the neighborhood of 170,000. This would be a percentage gain about the same as Montgomery's.

The Prince Georges figure means that the Greater Washington area outside the District has a population of about 635,000. The District's total, due to be announced Monday, is expected to be 835,000, or perhaps less. Thus, the entire metropolitan area would have a grand total close to 1,470,000.

President Sees Our Justice As Challenge to New Tyranny

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

"Absolute power is again on the march," President Truman said yesterday at the cornerstone-laying ceremonies for the 13 million dollar United States Courthouse here.

Without mentioning the Korean crisis at any time, the President said that the American concept of justice is a challenge to "the new forms of tyranny as it was to the old."

The President spoke before 2500 persons who braved 92-degree heat at the site of the rising tribunal, Constitution ave. and John Marshall pl. nw.

All speakers praised Chief Judge Bolitha J. Laws of District Court who, with the assistance of other judges, lawyers and laymen was able to obtain for Washington the modern Federal Court building.

When the stone was laid, President Truman, rather inexpertly, daubed on the mortar with a silver trowel. He balanced the stone as it was lowered into place, and with several flourishes, cleaned up his job by scraping away the excess cement.

On the crowded speakers' platform with Mr. Truman were his military aides, members of the Supreme Court, also of the United States Court of Appeals and District Court, both of which will be

Navy Ordered By President To Block Attacks Against Formosa

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

In a momentous decision, clearly accepting the risk of world war, President Truman yesterday ordered American air and sea power rushed to help the South Korean forces, and drew a precise line against further Communist aggression in the Pacific.

Mr. Truman's decision, contained in a 400-word, unambiguous statement, commits the United States to positive, belligerent action against further Communist advances in the Far East.

The move to help South Korea by arms was taken in advance of an expected United Nations resolution calling for military aid, because reports from the Korean battlefront Monday afternoon and evening made clear that the offer must be announced at once or resistance of the Korean forces themselves—key to a successful defense—would collapse.

Protection for Formosa

Besides the announcement that American air and sea forces were ordered to "give cover and support" to the South Koreans, Mr. Truman's statement declared:

1. The United States Seventh Fleet has been ordered to prevent any attack, long since anticipated from the Chinese Communists, on Formosa.

The decision was taken Monday evening. Before midnight, full orders had been transmitted to General MacArthur in Tokyo.

2. United States forces in the Philippines will be strengthened and military help to those Communist guerilla-harried islands will be speeded.

3. Military aid to French and native forces in Indo-China, fighting Communist-led rebels there, will also be speeded up.

The President's statement was released at noon yesterday after a high-level White House meeting with top Congressional leaders of both parties. It met overwhelming support on Capitol Hill, and caused great excitement in European centers.

Note Delivered to Russia

Later in the day, the Administration presented a note to the Kremlin, via Ambassador Kirk in Moscow, asking Russia to use its influence to end the Korea fighting. The text of the note was not at once made public, but State Department informants said it advised Russia of what action the United States was taking. By implication, it indicated the American conviction that Russia could stop the fighting if it wanted to.

But, it was reported, it, like Mr. Truman's statement itself, carefully avoided charging Russia with responsibility. This was to make sure that the back door is left open for the Russians to dis-

Countries Vote For Military Sanctions to Halt Asian Incursion

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Lake Success, June 27.—For the first time in its history, the United Nations voted at 10:40 tonight to apply military sanctions against an aggressor.

Delegates of seven out of the 11 nations on the Security Council took the unprecedented step of asking all U. N. members to help South Korea stop the Communist invasion.

The seven agreed to support an American resolution recommending:

"That the members of the United Nations furnish such assistance to the republic of Korea as may be necessary to repel the armed attack and to restore international peace and security in the area."

Their reasons, as stated in the resolution, were that the continuing invasion was an act of aggression, a breach of the peace, and a violation of the Security Council's cease-fire order of last Sunday.

Yugoslavia Votes Against

Those who voted for U. N. action against the North Koreans were: The United States, United Kingdom, France, China, Cuba, Norway, and Ecuador. The delegate of Marshal Tito's Yugoslavia voted against it, on the ground that such drastic measures were not needed.

The representatives of India, the greatest non-Communist power of Asia, and of Egypt, the leading nation of the Arab world, were unable to vote one way or the other because they lacked instructions from home. The Indian delegate tried eight times during the afternoon and evening to get a telephoned answer from his government, but without success.

Shortly after the historic vote, the council rejected by 7 to 1, with a reversed lineup, a Yugoslav resolution calling for a renewed cease-fire appeal and an attempt to mediate between the two halves of Korea.

First Such Act by World Group

This was not only the first time the United Nations had ever pledged help to a victim of aggression; it was also the first time that any international organization had done so. The old League of Nations never went so far in its 22 years' history as to call upon its members to use force against a violator.

Today's decision was a swift international indorsement of President Truman's order to use American ships and planes in Korea. It also settled at one stroke the inconclusive four-year efforts in the U. N. to put military contingents at the disposal of the Security Council.

Confronted with a real emergency, the Council cut through all previous argument on this issue,

Text of Truman Statement

Text of President Truman's announcement yesterday that U. S. air and sea forces have been ordered to assist South Korea:

In Korea the government forces, which were armed to prevent border raids and to preserve internal security, were attacked by invading forces from North Korea. The Security Council of the United Nations called upon the invading troops to cease hostilities and to withdraw to the thirty-eighth parallel.

This they have not done, but on the contary have pressed the attack. The Security Ciuncil called upon all members of the United Nations to render every assistance to the United Nations in the execution of this resolution. In these circumstances I have ordered United States Air and Sea Forces to give the Korean government troops cover and support.

The attack upon Korea makes it plain beyond all doubt that communism has passed beyond the use of subversion to conquer independent nations and will now use armed invasion and war. It has defied the orders of the Security Council of the United Nations issued to preserve international peace and security. In these circumstances the occupation of Formosa by Communist forces would be a direct threat to the security of the Pacific area and to United States forces performing their lawful and necessary functions in that area.

Accordingly I have ordered the Seventh Fleet to prevent any attack on Formosa. As a corollary to this action I am calling upon the Chinese government on Formosa to cease all air and sea operations against the mainland. The Seventh Fleet will see that this is done. The determination of the future status of Formosa must await the restoration of security in the Pacific. A peace settlement with Japan, or consideration by the United Nations.

I have also directed that United States forces in the Philippines be strengthened and that military assistance to the Philippine government be accelerated.

I have similarly directed acceleration in the furnishing of military assistance to the forces of France and the associated states in Indo-China and the dispatch of a military mission to provide close working relations with those forces.

I know that all members of the United Nations will consider carefully the consequences of this latest aggression in Korea in defiance of the charter of the United Nations. A return to the rule of force in international affairs would have far reaching effects. The United States will continue to uphold the rule of law.

I have instructed Ambassador (Warren R.) Austin, as the representative of the United States to the Security Council, to report these steps to the council.

No Advance Into Red Area

U. S. Forces' Goal Is to Drive North Koreans Back to Border

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

American Navy and Air Force units moved into action yesterday, taking control of the sea and air in the trouble-torn Korea-Formosa area.

They are under orders to drive the North Korean Communists back behind the Thirty-Eighth Parallel border and bar any counter-blow from China but to go no farther.

Department of Defense spokesmen, disclosing these moves to carry out President Truman's historic Far East decision, made it plain, however, that this is the only restriction placed on General MacArthur's use of warplanes and ships to end the Korean war.

A top Navy official said 7th Fleet destroyers undoubtedly already were in the Formosan Straits, screening that island from Chinese Communist assault, and that plans called for moving more warships westward.

Next Move Up to Russia

Military men here believe the action placed the next move squarely up to Russia. They felt the North Korean invaders now could be thrown back beyond the border—unless the USSR sends planes, troops and naval units to support the Korean Communist aggressors.

This clearly could mean a world war and top Government officials are betting that the Kremlin will not so act.

Of course, if Russia is not bluffing, its large army in eastern Siberia and Manchuria could quickly sweep down into southern Korea. Soviet air strength in the area also is believed to be large—numerically superior to MacArthur's air power. There are seven or eight airfields in North Korea capable of handling fighters and light or medium bombers.

There is a sizable USSR submarine fleet based at Vladivostok, plus some destroyers and smaller haval craft. If Moscow wants war, it wouldn't have much trouble taking South Korea—but would find itself embattled on two or more land fronts and atomic attacks from the air.

Nor can Russia properly claim

House Votes Draft Extension, Power to Call Reserves, Guard

The House, spurred by the Korean crisis, overwhelmingly approved a one-year extension of the present draft law yesterday, but similar action was blocked in the Senate until today.

The House voted 315 to 4 in favor of a compromise agreed to in less than an hour by Senate-House conferees. In addition to continuing the present draft law until July 9, 1951, it gives President Truman new power to mobilize the reserves and National Guard for 21 months' service.

Both the congressional conferees and Pentagon spokesmen, however, stressed that this action did not mean any mobilization is now planned or that members of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps reserve components will be ordered to active duty.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.), sought immediate Senate action to send the bill to the White House but was headed off by Senator James P. Kem (R., Mo.), who objected to giving the President power to induct youths when Congress is not in session.

Yoshida Forms New Pro-U. S. Cabinet in Japan

Tokyo, June 28 (Wednesday) (U.P.).—Premier Shigeru Yoshida announced today that he had lined up a strong pro-American cabinet, less than 24 hours after his ministers resigned en masse.

The resignations were announced yesterday, to enable a reorganization in the light of the Korean military developments.

The new cabinet, like the outgoing one, consists almost entirely of members of Yoshida's Democratic Liberal Party.

It includes eight members of the old cabinet. The only non-Liberal representative is a member of Parliament who belongs to the "Green Breeze" Party — a conservative

Three ministerial posts were left vacant for the time being, pending a decision by the wavering Democratic Party on whether to join the new coalition.

Truman Act Given Support By U. S. Press

Editorial Backing Of Korean Defense Nearly Unanimous

President Truman's historic challenge to Communist aggression in Asia has the overwhelming support of American newspapers.

An Associated Press roundup of editorial comment early this morning discloses that leading newspapers of all political persuasions, are backing up the President and supporting the Government's vigorous action.

The Chicago Trbune (editorials of which are also printed in The Washington Times-Herald) is alone among major newspapers quoted in attacking the President and opposing the Nation's Far Eastern policy.

Appeasement Lesson Learned

The New York Times: "A momentous and courageous act . . . Both the United Nations and the United States have now decided to face up to the Russo-Communist challenge. . . . We have learned the lesson that appeasement does not serve peace; that in the face of naked aggression the forces of peace must make a stand sooner or later, and that the sooner they do so, the better will be their position.

"The present action comes late, but there is hope that it still comes soon enough to restore the morale of the Korean armies and to avert a bandwagon psychosis among other Asiatic nations that might

Area Military Installations Tighten Security Regulations

Washington area military installations last night tightened security measures in the face of the growing international crisis.

Within an hour after receiving permission from the Pentagon, the commanders at Andrews and Bolling Air Force Bases ordered a more stringent inspection of visitors.

The day also produced these developments:

1. Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) announced a pending bill to establish a new Office of Civil Defense for the District will be considered "as soon as possible" by the House District Committee.

2. More than 12,000 National Guardsmen in Washington, Virginia and Maryland, it was learned, will be ready for immediate service if President Truman activates the guard in the Korean emergency.

3. Second Army headquarters at Fort Meade disclosed its anti-aircraft units will "defend" Washington against a simulated air attack this fall.

The clampdown at Bolling and Andrews Air Force Bases followed announcement by the Department of Defense that the Joint Chiefs of Staff had authorized individual base commanders to place their bases or installations on a "restricted" basis if such action is deemed necessary. This authorization was transmitted yesterday to the major commands of all ser-

BULLETIN

Tokyo, Wednesday, June 28. (U.P.).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced in a statement this afternoon that the forces of South Korea now are holding the Communist North Korean invaders.

Tokyo (Wednesday), June 28 (AP). — American-manned jet fighters and light bombers have begun bombing and strafing missions against North Korean forces, it was learned today.

Several targets have been attacked with 500-pound bombs, rockets and .50-caliber machine guns.

The missions against the Reds were confined to territory south of the thirty-eighth parallel which divides North and South Korea.

Kim Yong Ju, Korean minister in Tokyo, said United States Air Forces started their attacks at 7 p. m., last night (5 a. m., E.S.T. Tuesday).

Kim said he believed American naval units also were in action.

There has been no official announcement concerning the American role in the Korean hostilities but General MacArthur's dawn statement that combat operations had begun.

Informants said fast F-80 Lockheed Shooting Star jet fighters and Martin B-26 bombers are in action.

Earlier the South Korean army reported it had driven the Communist invaders out of Seoul and back to the edge of a key city 12 miles north, informed sources said.

The report came as U. S. air and sea forces sprang into action against the Korean Communist invaders on President Truman's orders and Moscow radio asserted the northerners had entered Seoul at four points.

The report came from an American source which said the information came from South Korean army forces in the Seoul area.

The source said the North Korean troops were hurled back

Stocks Slump As Trading Nears 11-Year Peak

New York, June 27 (AP).—Stock and commodity markets had a bad case of chills and fever today. Prices swung widely in the heaviest trading in nearly 11 years under fast-breaking news from Washington and the Korean war front. But at the close extremes of both highs and lows were trimmed.

Stock prices soared and commodities plummeted in the morning, as war talk cooled over night. Then with the noontime word that American planes and ships would aid the South Koreans, securities slumped badly.

Trading was at the fastest pace since the start of World War II, and much faster than the Stock Exchange facilities could record expeditiously. At the same time, the martial talk sent foodstuffs and raw material prices skyward again.

At the close, both stocks and commodities had pulled away from their extremes. Stocks closed from $1 to $2 lower than Monday, when losses ran to $7.

Corporate bonds closed lower in heavy trading. United States Government securities, steady during Monday's uproar, were sold down sharply today.

Rubber futures were up the 2 cents a pound permitted daily limit. Tin was higher in New York, Singapore and London. Other metals were slightly higher to a little lower.

Truman Draws Line Against Red Thrusts

engage themselves from the matter.

The President's statement has the effect of reversing a year-old decision to keep the American position flexible in the Far East, to avoid setting a firm line any step beyond which would mean war, and specifically, not to conduct any military action in defense of Korea or Formosa.

Willing to Fight Aggression

State Department officials, in private conversations, confirmed that the statement is a firm undertaking to fight in the event of aggressive steps by Communists from the outside against those two places and also Indo-China. Hitherto, the American position on Indo-China was nebulous. For Formosa and Korea it had been clear: we would not fight for them.

It was indicated that the reversal of that position came about, on the stimulus of the Korean fight, from three principal developments.

One was the fact that the situation in China had crystallized. A year ago there appeared to be a possibility of coping with the Communist forces there through other, less rigid methods.

The second was the fact that Formosa, contrary to expectations, still stands. The estimate was that it would fall to landing attacks shortly after the Communists completed their conquest of the Chinese mainland.

The Associated Press reported from Tapei, Formosa, early today that the Chinese Nationalists had ordered their air force and navy to cease attacks on the Communist mainland in accordance with Mr. Truman's request.

Nationalist Foreign Minister George Yeh welcomed the President's order for warship protection as "a most welcome sign of comradeship in the fight against communism."

The third, and perhaps the most important, is that the Administration thinks it now has a much clearer understanding of Russian intent and tacts.

The State Department consensus is that the Korean attack is another bit of "feeling out," of probing for soft spots.

Accordingly, it was decided, as one official put it, "if Russia is askng a question, Korea is the best place to provide an answer to it."

And, at the same time, the answer is also provided in the President's decision in the event Russia wants to "ask questions" about Formosa, Southeast Asia or the Philippines.

If this estimate of the situation is correct, the Russians will let the North Koreans fall back to their border, the Thirty-eighth Parallel, and, in their own propaganda, dismiss the affair as something initiated by the North Koreans, independently and without Russian responsibility.

But the decision, it is freely admitted, risks the chances of world-wide war in the event that the State Department has miscalculated the Russian intent. If the Kremlin wants to make a war of it, it would appear that the United States is now committed to take up the fight.

Nevertheless, within the State Department, officials argued that unless the United States took firm steps it faced the prospect of a whole series of "limited offensives" by Russia throughout the Pacific area and indeed the whole world.

Might as Well Act Now

On one of these, sometime, the United States would have to say that "this one is it" and that it would have to be stopped, even at the risk of war. The one that is "it", it was argued, might as well be Korea, and now, instead of later.

Taking this action, it was contended, would hearten weaker states all around the Russian periphery. Omitting to take it would destroy faith and hope of those countries, particularly in the Middle East and Southeast Asia, and impel those who now try to maintain independence against Russia threats to give up the struggle.

Besides leaving a way out for the Russians, the President's decision has something in it for the peoples of the Pacific, the established governments of their nations, and finally, for the Republicans in Congress. For several months, GOP leaders have been stridently demanding a commitment in behalf of Formosa.

A wise-cracking radio commentator hailed the statement yesterday as "a diplomatic masterpiece, sterilizing Formosa and the Republicans at the same time."

Formosa Now Safe

The order to the Seventh Fleet to prevent any attack on Formosa means, unless the situation develops into World War III, that that island is now safe from Chinese Communist landing attacks.

The American action in supplying sea and air forces, plus inanimate equipment, is in no way a legal declaration of war. The Administration position is that the action is taken in consequence of and in accordance with the U. N. Security Council resolution of Sunday.

As the President said in his statement, the Security Council "called upon all members of the United Nations to render every assistance to the United Nations in the execution" of its resolution demanding that the North Koreans cease firing and withdraw north of the thirty-eighth parallel.

"In these circumstances," Mr. Truman said, he issued his order.

Government legal experts also pointed out that as Commander-in-Chief, the President has the authority, set by many precedents, to order armed forces into action if the United States is endangered by an emergency situation.

Action in Boxer Uprising

Such action was taken in the Boxer Rebellion in China early in this century, and various military uproars in Latin America, including the situation in Nicaragua, into which American Marines were sent.

The President said that the Korean attack "makes it plain beyond all doubt that communism has passed beyond the use of subversion to conquer independent nations and will now use armed intervention and war."

This being the case, he argued, the occupation of Formosa by Communist forces "would be a direct threat to the security of the Pacific area and to United States forces performing their lawful and necessary functions in that area."

The future status of Formosa, Mr. Truman insisted, must be left to a decision made after "the restoration of security in the Pacific, a peace settlement with Japan, or consideration by the United Nations."

In blunt words, then, the United States has said it will not accept or tolerate a settlement of that future status—whether Chinese, Japanese, independent or whatever—by armed force or subversion.

As a corollary to the decision for American fleet defense of that Island, the Chief Executive said he was calling on the Chinese Government, making its last stand there, to cease all air and sea attacks against the mainland. The Seventh Fleet "will see that this is done," Mr. Truman added tartly.

Effect on Huks Feared

Manila, June 27 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Jonathan Anderson, chairman of the joint United States military advisory group, today said "it isn't the Korean situation that worries us, it is the local situation."

He said he meant the possible influence developments in Korea might have upon the Communist-led Hukbalahaps in their fight against the Philippine government.

South Korean Ships Sail

Pearl Harbor, June 27 (AP).—Three small South Korean warships said to be armed with American guns and ammunition were at sea today, bound for their embattled homeland.

The ships left Pearl Harbor last night under the command of Admiral Sohn Wun Il, commander of the Korean navy.

Pearl Harbor sources said the three PC-type ships were armed with guns and ammunition before leaving the United States West Coast. They arrived here Friday en route to Korea.

He declared the northerners were driven out of Seoul at about 11:30 a. m., Korean time (8 p. m., Tuesday, Easter Standard Time).

Earlier reports had said the northerners entered Seoul at 7 a. m. Korean time. A Moscow broadcast had asserted President Syngman Rhee and his government had fled Seoul and there was rioting in the streets.

A blackout of all communications with Seoul tended to confirm that the invaders had occupied part of the city at least for a time.

Informed sources said United States manned jet-fighters already were maintaining constant air cover over South Korea.

Other jets and some bombers were armed, loaded and gassed ready for a takeoff signal today, they added. The jets were presumably equipped with rockets, a powerful weapon against ground troops.

Korean accounts said that American bombers were attacking Communist tanks.

Key American air bases in Japan were manned with wartime precautions. Antiaircraft guns, long set up, were ready for instant action. Pilots, ground crews and all officers were on wartime alerts for any emergency.

Nothing more has come from General MacArthur's headquarters since a terse announcement that President Truman's orders for action against further Communist aggression were being carried out.

The announcement said that air forces and "naval elements" were conducting "combat missions."

An advance echelon of general headquarters was established in South Korea itself. High officials were in continuous conference in MacArthur's headquarters as it moved more definitely to a wartime basis.

All information was being analyzed carefully to see whether security was involved. All efforts to obtain more information on combat operations were unsuccessful.

So far today, the only information was this announcement from Command are conducting combat MacArthur:

"The Far East Air Forces and naval elements of the Far East missions south of the 38th parallel of Korea in support of the Korean republic.

"Ammunition and supplies are being air and water lifted to Korea to aid the South Korean forces.

"A small advance echelon of GHQ (general headquarters) has been established in Korea."

MacArthur, commander of American forces in the Far East as well as of the Japanese occupation, gave no details of specific combat.

A South Korean broadcast in the name of President Syngman Rhee said, however, that United States bombers and fighter planes already were attacking North Korean invader tanks in the field.

The French Press Agency's reporter in Seoul reported that the invading North Koreans had recaptured Uijongbu, 12 miles north of Seoul, thus stopping a southern counter-offensive.

The Reds first took Uijongbu Monday and swept to the outskirts of Seoul. Later reports said the southern counterattack had recaptured it and driven the Reds 20 miles north of Seoul.

Maurice Chanteloup, the French agency man, who said he was the only Caucasian reporter in Seoul, made his report by telephone that the Communists had retaken Uijongbu Tuesday morning.

He also reported the South Korean radio Tuesday night broadcast hourly notices to southern troops to wait until Wednesday morning, when full-scale American aid was coming.

Korean reports that American ground troops would be used were denied in Tokyo and Washington.

Simultaneously with the American action, the South Koreany Army, hard-pressed and shaken by the lightning invasion of the Russian-trained northerners Sunday, braced itself and was reported hurling the enemy back at vital points.

An evidently well-founded report in Tokyo said American bombers immediately would attack all South Korean towns captured by the Russian-equipped North Koreans and would keep it up until they were driven back north of the Thirty-eighth Parallel boundary.

President Truman's order to General MacArthur called for "cover and support" for the South Korean troops, indicating fighter planes also would be used.

Already, American Mustang fighters guarding the air evacuation of American civilians from Korea had shot down four Russian-made North Korean Yak fighters that tried to interfere Tuesday.

The broadcast from Seoul early Wednesday quoted President Rhee as saying a General Church had been appointed commander of a "joint defense operation" by the United States and South Korean forces.

Apparently he referred to Maj. Gen. John H. Church, commander of the Ryukus (Okinawa) Military Government. There was no confirmation of this report, however.

Another Seoul broadcast said American ground troops were joining the fight, but this was flatly denied by General MacArthur's information officer.

General Church

Frederick, Md. Man in Korea Spotlight

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
MAJ. GEN JOHN H. CHURCH
. . . reported defense commander

Frederick, Md., June 27 (AP).—Maj. Gen. John H. Church, reportedly named to command a joint defense operation against the Communist invaders of South Korea, formerly was a National Guard instructor stationed here.

His wife is the former Regina Haller of Frederick.

Born in Pennsylvania, he will be 58 tomorrow.

Gen. Church entered the Army as a reserve lieutenant following his graduation from New York University in 1917 and served with the 28th infantry regiment of the first division in World War I.

He had two tours of duty in Frederick as National Guard instructor between the wars, from 1922 to 1926 and from 1930 to 1933.

His service in World War II was with the 45th division. During its training period at Fort Sill, Okla., he was assistant chief of staff and later chief of staff.

In action, he commanded the division's 157th infantry on the Anzio beachead in Italy and his regiment was one of the units in a special task force that finally broke out of the lock the Germans held on that operation for weeks.

He also served in southern France.

When he returned to the United States in 1946 he was made commanding general of the infantry replacement training center at Fort McClellan, Ala. Later he became commanding general of the replacement training center at Fort Jackson, S. C., and assistant commander of the fifth infantry division.

He went to Japan in February of 1948 and recently has been commander of the Okinawa Military Government under General MacArthur.

London, June 27 (U.P.).—The British House of Commons stood today and cheered America's decision to use warships and planes in Korea, as western Europe prayed that the step might not precipitate a third world war.

Prime Minister Clement Attlee announced the momentous news to the chamber, which had taken on a sudden atmosphere of unity for the first time in months. He read the text of President Truman's statement and added:

"After the bitter experience of the past 35 years, salvation is dependent on prompt and effective measures to resist aggression wherever it might occur."

Conservative Leader Winston Churchill, advised of the American decision in an earlier private conference with Attlee, thanked the Prime Minister.

"A sense of unity dominates the whole house when questions of this gravity seem to touch the principles of freedom and law for which we stand," Churchill commented.

Cabinet Approves U. S. Stand

Before the Commons session, the British Cabinet was advised of President Truman's decision, and immediately approved it.

Nevertheless, there was a general feeling that Korea is America's responsibility. There was no atmosphere of crisis here.

In the event of war, Churchill and Attlee would form a national coalition government like the one Churchill headed in the last war. However, informed sources said such a stage had not yet been reached.

Western Europe was startled by President Truman's announcement, but generally it applauded the idea, despite fears that another world conflict might be set off.

West German officials privately applauded the United States step, considering it evident that America would not let them down. Mayor Ernst Reuter of West Berlin said he hoped Mr. Truman's decision would bring the Soviets to sense and reason and keep the peace of the world." He said the Berlin blockade had taught the West that only a strong stand could halt Russian aggression.

Hope to Restore Peace

West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer said that "the federal government will examine the situation very carefully and hopes seriously that peace can be restored very soon."

In Paris, the Radical Socialist Party appealed to all non-Communist parties to end the current French government crisis and unite in a national coalition, in view of the grave international situation.

In Sweden, which has tried to stay neutral in the cold war, officials expressed fear that it might develop into a world conflict.

In Vienna, an Austrian government spokesman said America's latest step represented "the only workable effort toward maintaining peace."

"Only bold actions can help—compromises would be the end," he said.

A British Foreign Office spokesman said Britain is reexamining its policy toward Communist China in view of the Korean war. The spokesman said that thus far there has been no change in Britain's attitude.

Tells of Fighting

Soviet Radio Is Silent on U. S. Action

Oslo, Norway, June 27 (AP).—Radio Moscow did not mention President Truman's order sending aid to South Korea in its Russian-language news broadcasts heard here tonight.

The broadcasts did not mention the Korean situation until 11:30 p. m., Moscow time, (4:30 p. m. EST) when a North Korean communique claiming victories despite heavy South Korean resistance was broadcast.

That transmission also quoted foreign reports that American ships are operating in Korean waters, but gave no details.

Spellman Calls for Prayers

New York, June 27 (AP).—Francis Cardinal Spellman, Roman Catholic Archbishop of New York, has called for special prayers Sunday "for the unfortunate populace of Korea, which has been so brutally assaulted."

He directed yesterday that the message, contained in a pastoral letter, be read at all Sunday masses in the archdiocese.

Red Cross Aids Refugees

Detroit, June 27 (U.P.).—The American Red Cross today ordered its Japanese director to give emergency financial assistance to military evacuees from Korea.

Henry Janeway, director of Japanese operations, also was authorized to handle emergency communications for all evacuees, military and civilian.

Welfare inquiries regarding the Americans on the island from friends or relatives can be originated through any Red Cross chapter.

Mediation is Offered

Geneva, Switzerland, June 27 (AP).—The International Committee of the Red Cross has offered to mediate in the Korean conflict.

Neither government of Korea is signatory to conventions signed here last fall, but the committee urged application of humanitarian principles to protect war victims.

Red Chinese Forces Invade Nationalist Sanmen Island

Taipei, Formosa, June 27 (AP).—Chinese Communists today invaded Sanmen Island in the Wanshan group southwest of Hongkong and fierce fighting is in progress, Nationalist naval headquarters reported.

The Nationalist Air Force meanwhile told of attacks on Communist mainland airfields and harbor installations at Swatow, and on Red junk concentrations near the Nationalist defense outpost at Quemoy Island, off the China coast across from Formosa. Quemoy is near Communist-held Amoy, a likely jump-off in an invasion of Formosa.

The invasion of Sanmen Island was made by Communists aboard two LSTs and more than 10 junks, the Nationalist naval source said.

Nationalist warships also were reported to have shelled Chikwan and Talou Islands yesterday. These are small islands off the Chekiang coast about 225 miles south of Shanghai. The announcement said more than 100 Reds were killed at Chikwan and all the defense works at Talou were destroyed.

The air headquarters said wharves and storehouses were hit in the attack on Swatow, with heavy damage to Red installations. It was the second straight day Swatow had been hit and the Nationalist planes encountered only weak antiaircraft fire, the report said.

Airfields at Foochow, capital of Fukien Province, and Shienou, 90 miles northwest, were bombed without resistance. The Nationalists said both fields seemed to have been deserted with no sign of repairs after previous raids.

The Nationalist air attacks near Quemoy Island hit concentrations of 70, 60 and more than 140 Communists junks. Thirty junks were sunk and many others damaged, the Air oFrce said.

S. Korea Officer Predicts Last-Ditch Battle on Reds

At a press conference at the Korean Embassy yesterday Lieut. Col. Eun Shan Chang, former chief of Korean artillery, said his army could fight to the last man in the rugged parts of his country. He said the rainy season, due to begin the end of June or early in July, would bog down Communist tank operations.

"Our enemies blundered by attacking at the wrong time of the year," the colonel said. He added that the South Koreans long ago planned delaying action and their forces were adequately dispersed.

He said there are hard-surfaced airports in South Korea, adequate for fighters and light bombers.

Many Americans Offering to Fight With So. Koreans

The Korean Embassy yesterday said it has received nearly 50 telegrams, telephone calls and letters from Americans, many of them former Air Force men, offering to fight against the North Korean Communist invaders.

"About all we can do is thank them," a spokesman said, explaining that the Embassy will not do any recruiting. He added that the offers "are still coming in."

Navy Yard Halts Layoffs; to Recall 500

Representative John W. McCormack (D., Mass.) yesterday said the Navy has decided to retain 500 temporary employes at the Boston Navy Yard who were scheduled to be laid off July 1.

He said the yard also will recall 20 former employes for temporary work. The Navy does not know how long either group will be retained.

McCormack said the decision was prompted by extra work under the foreign military-aid program and the establishment of "higher priorities on certain regular active ship work."

Indo-China Looks Upon U. S. Action in Korea As Pattern in Event of Red Invasion There

Hanoi, Indo-China, June 27 (AP). United States action in the Korean crisis is looked upon in Indo-China as a pattern of future American action in the event this country is invaded by Chinese Communists.

The security of the North China border depends upon the same international guarantees that were to have protected Korea's 38th parallel.

Strong United States action in the Korea crisis, according to the consensus in this strategic southeast Asia country, will give pause to open Chinese Communist aid to the Viet Minh forces of Moscow-trained Ho Chih Minh, who is battling the Western-recognized and French-supported Viet Nam government of former Emperor Bao Dai.

The French forces garrisoning the Indo-China frontier are admittedly inadequate to steam a full-fledged Chinese Communist thrust into this country. The fear of starting World War Three is regarded as the vital factor in dissuading Peiping from a military expedition to back up the Communist-led Viet Minh forces.

French and Viet Namese officials fear that a successful Communist conquest of South Korea would flash the green light for a similar coup in Indo-China by Chinese Communist troops. The time for the Chinese Reds to act would be before the full effect could be felt of the American program of aid to Indo-China.

But so far there are no signs along the frontier of any such development. This correspondent returned from the border Sunday.

French officers estimate the total of Chinese Communist troops stationed in the frontier zone at about 15,000. Their activity has been confined mainly to cleaning up guerilla units and reestablishing order.

Large Communist armies are operating under the command of General Liu Po Chen in the southwest and General Lin Piao in the southeast of China. These troops, which could be moved quickly to the frontier, are preoccupied now with mopping up thousands of guerilla dissidents overrunning South China, and the task of preparing the assault on Formosa.

Chinese Communist aid to the Viet Minh is increasing but still on a minor scale. Small shipments of war material are crossing the border on recently opened roads and the Viet Minh is reported to be using Chinese territory, with Communist sanction, for raids on French frontier positions.

There is some speculation here that the Korean war will have one direct and immediate effect on the Indo-Chinese conflict. The war material which might have gone to Ho Chi Minh may now be going to North Korea instead.

Australia Sending Bombers to Malaya

Canberra, Australia, June 27 (U.P.).—Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies announced today that Australia is sending a squadron of heavy bombers to Malaya to help combat Communist rebels there.

"The Korean invasion is Communist inspired and directed," Menzies said. The Korean incident cannot be looked at in isolation, nor can we in Australia regard it as remote from our own interests and safety.

"There are other points of possible attack on or off the coast of China. There also is a Communist-led campaign in Indo-China.

"Much nearer home are the operations of Communist guerillas in Malaya. We can't regard the Malayan task as solely Britain's."

China Reds Hint Early Move Against Tibet

Hongkong, June 27 (U.P.).—Chinese Communists hinted today that moves against Tibet may be forthcoming soon.

The radio in Peking, capital of Communist China, said a team of 30 students, "who will take part in the liberation of Tibet," had arrived in Chengtu, in western China, from Peking.

U. N. Backs Truman Firmness on Korea

and actually gave the U. N. what it has always lacked—an international force to keep the peace.

The British are known to be anxious to send planes and perhaps small naval craft from their base at Hongkong. The Australians have already announced that they would contribute.

What other countries may decide, and what help they can give, was a matter of guesswork tonight. But it was clear that the United Nations had passed a historic milestone at the very moment when its fortunes seemed lowest.

The biggest crowd in U.N. history stormed the temporary headquarters at Lake Success to watch the proceedings. Officials estimated that 5000 visitors had been turned away after the council chamber had been packed to the doors.

The Soviet chair at the council table was empty all afternoon. Delegate Jacob A. Malik was not present to cast a veto or to delay the Council's action.

The American delegation had not been sure of Malik's intentions. One of the reasons President Truman issued his statement this morning, instead of waiting for the Council to act, was the fear that Malik might return to the Council table just to throw a monkey-wrench into the machinery.

U. S. Would Have Gone Ahead

The United States would have gone ahead with its Pacific plans in any event, an authoritative source said yesterday, even if Russia had interposed a veto. But as it turned out, the Security Council gave overwhelming backing to the Koreans and an equally emphatic indorsement of the American position.

One delegate after another praised the President's statement, issued more than three hours before the Council assembled. Jean Chauvel of France expressed his country's "appreciation." Sir Terence Shone of Britain called it a "forthright statement; Delegate Sunde of Norway said it was a "momentous" utterance.

Even T. F. Tsiang, representing Chiang Kai-Shek's Nationalist government, expressed "gratitude" for the President's decision to protect Formosa with the American fleet.

"I think all my people must be grateful for that offer of aid," Tsiang said, although he insisted that Formosa had been a province of China before 1895 and must be regarded as such today.

Moves with Speed

In claiming Formosa for China, Tsiang was raising a legal issue that may plague the U. N. later in the year, when it faces the question of Chinese representation. But this was an issue for the future; the issue today was aggression in Korea, and the Security Council moved with unaccustomed speed in dealing with it.

The chairman, Sir Benegal Rau of India, began on a sober note.

"The events of the past two days," he said, "have filled all of us with the gravest anxiety as to the near future. Many see in them the beginning of a third world war with all its horrors.

"A terrible burden therefore rests upon us as the body charged with the primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace. The people of the world are weary of war and rumors of war, and we must try our best not to fail them."

Recalls Indian Settlement

The Indian then recalled the "paralyzing distrust" and bitterness between India and Pakistan earlier this year, and the meeting between the prime ministers of the two countries that eased the tension. If this was intended as a hint of a Truman-Stalin meeting, the Indian did not make it explicit.

"I mention this by way of showing," he said, "that even when things appear to be at their worst there is no need for despair."

After inviting Ambassador John M. Chang to take his place for Korea at the end of the table, Rau called on Ambassador Warren R. Austin to speak for the United States. Austin described the Korean crisis as the gravest in U.N. history, and branded the invasion of Southern Korea as "an attack on the United Nations itself."

He argued that it was the Council's "plain duty" to invoke "stringent sanctions" to stop the attack, and said he was "happy and proud to report that the United States is prepared, as a loyal member of the United Nations, to furnish assistance to the Republic of Korea."

He then read the proposed American resolution, describing it as the "logical next step" after the cease-fire order of last Sunday. He also read President Truman's statement of a few hours before.

The first to reply was Alex Bebler of Yugoslavia, who proposed a substitute resolution that would do no more than renew the cease-fire order and start mediation between the two governments in Korea. Bebler pictured the war in Korea as the consequence of the artificial division of the country along the thirty-eighth parallel.

A policy of "spheres of influence," he warned, could lead to a third world war, and he insisted that after only two days of fighting it would be wrong "to abandon all hope" of a settlement.

Ambassador Chang, speaking next for Korea, took no notice of the Yugoslav proposal, and pleaded with the Council to back its moral judgment of last Sunday "with the power of enforcement." He appealed for the help of all U. N. members "in order to expel the invader from our territory and act directly in the establishment of international peace and security."

Austin's Speech, Resolution

Lake Success, June 27—Here is the text of Ambassador Warren R. Austin's statement and the American resolution submitted to the Security Council:

THE United Nations finds itself confronted today with the gravest crisis in its existence.

Forty-eight hours ago the Security Council, in an emergency session, determined that the armed invasion of the Republic of Korea by armed forces from Northern Korea constituted a breach of the peace. Accordingly, the Security Council called for a cessation of hostilities forthwith and the withdrawal by the Northern Korean authorities of their armed forces to the thirty-eighth parallel. The Security Council also requested the United Nations Commission on Korea to observe the withdrawal and to report. Finally, the Security Council called upon all members to render every assistance to the United Nations in the execution of the resolution and to refrain from giving assistance to the North Korea authorities.

The decision of the Security Council has been broadcast to the Korean authorities and is known to them. We now have before us the report of the United Nations Commission for Korea, which confirms our worst fears. It is clear that the authorities in North Korea have completely disregarded and flouted the decision of the Security Council. The armed invasion of the Republic of Korea continues. This is in fact an attack on the United Nations itself. The North Korea authorities have even called upon the established government of the Republic to surrender.

IT IS hard to imagine a more glaring example of disregard for the United Nations and for all the principles which it represents. The most important provisions of the Charter are those outlawing aggressive war. It is precisely these provisions which the North Korea authorities have violated.

It is the plain duty of the Security Council to invoke stringent sanctions to restore international peace.

The Republic of Korea has appealed to the United Nations for protection. I am happy and proud to report that the United States is prepared as a loyal member of the United Nations to furnish assistance to the Republic of Korea.

I have tabled a resolution which I ask the council to consider favorably as the next step to restore world peace.

That resolution is as follows:

THE Security Council,

Having determined that the armed attack upon the Republic of Korea by forces from North Korea constitutes a breach of the peace,

Having called for an immediate cessation of hostilities, and

Having called upon the authorities of North Korea to withdraw forthwith their armed forces to the thirty-eighth parallel, and

Having noted from the report of the United Nations Commission for Korea that the authorities in North Korea have neither ceased hostilities nor withdrawn their armed forces to the thirty-eighth parallel, and that urgent military measures are requested to restore international peace and security, and

Having noted the appeal from the Republic of Korea to the United Nations for immediate and effective steps to secure peace and security, Recommends that the members of the United Nations furnish such assistance to the Republic of Korea as may be necessary to repel the armed attack and restored international peace and security in the area.

THIS is the logical consequence of the resolution concerning the complaint of aggression upon the Republic of Korea adopted at the 473rd meeting of the Security Council on 25 June 1950, and the subsequent events recited in the preamble of this resolution. That resolution of June 25 called upon all members to render every assistance to the United Nations in the execution of this resolution, and to refrain from giving assistance to the North Korean authorities. This new resolution is the logical next step. Its significance is affected by the violation of the former resolution, the continuation of aggression, and the urgent military measures required.

I wish now to read a statement which the President of the United States made today on this critical situation.

(Here Austin read the Truman statement).

The keynote of the resolution and my statement and the significant characteristic of the action taken by the President is support of the United Nations purposes and principles—in a word, "peace."

BLUFFS CALLED—Five areas in which Soviet bluffs have been called by American determination in the last three years. 1. Trieste, still a free city after its capture by Yugoslav Communists was prevented by an unshakable defense. 2. Iran, saved from Soviet domination by American aid. 3. Turkey, whose refusal to permit Russian control of the Dardanelles was bolstered by United States backing. 4. Greece, whose long civil war against Communist guerillas was won after the United States took over the job of military assistance from Britain. 5. Berlin, where the Soviet bluff was called by the airlift

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Should it turn out that President Truman has called a Soviet bluff with his order for air and naval support to South Korea, it would be the sixth time in three years.

The first five Russian attempts to bluff their way to control of important areas collapsed when they were called. The next few weeks should tell whether the Korean aggression is a bluff and whether it can be called.

Possible Diversion

Perhaps the assault on South Korea is not a bluff at all. It could be a diversion in favor of a Soviet move in another direction. It could be a genuine effort to overrun and Sovietize South Korea on the assaumption that hostilities could be confined to that area.

In case the move turns out to be a bluff, Mr. Truman's forthright action in calling it rests upon promising precedent. On their past record, the Soviets would not find it difficult to announce that their North Korean satellites had "repelled the aggression" an dhad withdrawn to their own border.

Something similar has occurred five times since the end of World War II, each time with a grave threat to the peace of the world. And each time a firm stand by the United States and its allies ended or modified the threat and returned things to the status quo.

The city of Trieste and the surrounding area of Venezia Giulia supplied the arena for the first test of determination between Russia and the West. In the last days of the war the territory had been occupied simultaneously by Yugoslavia from the east and the British Eighth army from the west. Tito's Yugoslav government immediately sought to annex Trieste, although it had been awarded to Italy in the shuffle following World War I.

Joint Control Setup

This attempt at annexation was resisted by the Western Allies with the result that joint control of the Venezia Giulia area was established, the city of Trieste being occupied by the United States. From then until Tito's break with the Kremlin, the attitude of Yugoslavia was belligerent and sometimes violent. During September, 1947, several efforts were made by Yugoslav troops to break through American defenses into the city. Some of these efforts resulted in pitched battles in which the Yugoslavs were driven off.

In the spring of 1948, the Western powers made political capital of the Trieste situation, with the result that Russia was driven to cover and the Communist strength in Italy greatly weakened. They suggested that Russia join them in a declaration that Trieste should be returned to Italy, a declaration in which Russia could not join without repudiating Yugoslavia and could not refuse without alienating the political fence-sitters in Italy. As a result, she did nothing and thousands of Italians voted anti-Communist in the elections that immediately followed.

The result of all this firmness and strategical maneuvering was that Trieste was held secure as a free city. And no full-scale war developed.

Crisis in Iran

During the same time, crises were brewing in Iran, Turkey and Greece. Despite Soviet concurrence in the Tehran promise that Iran's independence would be restored and protected, Russia began immediately after the war to take steps toward absorbing that oil-rich land. This action took the form of threats based on a Soviet-Iranian treaty of 1921. Finally revolt was threatened in the province of Azerbaijan. In 1948, Iran was included in the military assistance program for Korea and the Philippines and, until recently, things have been reasonably quiet there.

Russian threats to the security, and even the existence, of Greece and Turkey inspired the first outright resistanee since the war to Russian aggression. On March 12, 1947, the President announced what became known as the Truman Doctrine, a declaration that containment of communism within its present boundaries would be an aim of United States policy. To carry out this doctrine, Mr. Truman asked Congress for, and got, 300 million dollars for military assistance to Greece and 100 million for Turkey.

Greece, since the end of the war, had been the scene of a military bid by the Communists for control. All along the joint frontiers with Yugoslavia, Albania and Bulgaria, Communist guerillas had made inroads into Greek territory and were conducting successful campaigns. With the aid of American money, equipment and military advice, this civil war finally was won in 1949, though the defection of Yugoslavia from the Communist orbit helped considerably.

While Russia took no direct military action against Turkey, she had demanded control of the Dardanelles and had accompanied her demand with a threatening military posture. American assistance enabled Turkey to meet force with force and ended, for the time at least, the Soviet threat in this quarter.

Marshall Plan Success

Less dramatic but certainly no less decisive was the operation of the Marshall Plan, propounded June 5, 1947, by the then Secretary of State George C. Marshall. This plan was designed, by assisting the economic recovery of Western Europe, to thwart Soviet capture of that area by subversion among people disheartened and demoralized by the aftermath of war. How well the Marshall Plan has succeeded so far is best told by the election returns in the Marshall Plan countries, in which Communist influence has been steadily and sharply curtailed.

The final and most dramatic of all the bluff-calling by this country was the Berlin airlift of 1948, a courageous and unprecedented venture which saved Berlin from Soviet capture and, what was more important, saved United States prestige in Europe. The airlift was instituted to overcome the Russian blockade of Berlin, which began June 23, 1948, and was the culmination of three years of Soviet harassment.

Instituted June 27, the airlift continued until September 30, 1949, a total of 462 days of operation. The airlift fed, clothed and heated the homes of the 2,500,000 Germans in the Allied zone of the city; it demonstrated the willingness of the Allies to stand by their friends; it frustrated completely any Soviet aim of eliminating the Allies from Berlin.

At the same time, it may have served as a diversion to distract attention from Russian ingestion of China, which was completed during the course of the blockade. But, in any event, the blockade failed as a bluff to force the Western Powers out of the German capital because it was called with a firmness which could not be answered short of a major war.

If Russia is not now prepared to engage in all-out war, the Korean bluff no doubt can be called as the others have been. The next few weeks should tell.

East German Press Opens 'Fear' Drive

Berlin, June 27 (AP).—East Germany's Communist press today seized upon events in Korea and began a campaign to undermine the confidence of anti-Communist Germans in American protection.

The campaign began after reports from Seoul said Korean Communists had reached the South Korean capital but before the later reports that the Communists had been driven back and that the United States had decided to give powerful support to the southern Republicans, including the bombing of Communist-held towns south of the border.

The concerted editorial campaign in Soviet-controlled papers apparently was intended to destroy faith in American military power, picture United States leaders as war-crazed bunglers who miscalculated in Korea and frighten German masses into supporting the Soviet Union's "world peace camp."

"The events in Korea are a warning for west Germany, for all Germany, said Neues Deutschland, chief organ of the Socialist Unity (Communist) Party.

Sees Korea as Test Case

"Korea is a trial case for the planned American attack on the (East) German democratic republic."

Hewing to the Moscow line that it was American-trained South Koreans who were the aggressors, the paper said every German must draw the conclusion "to cast off the American provocateurs who attempt to dynamite world peace."

Communist papers that buried Korean news yesterday put it on the front page today, apparently in the belief that Communist success was imminent.

This editorial policy dovetailed with a report from sources close to the east Communist government last night that said the Kremlin policy line on Korea had been handed to all satellite governments in the Soviet bloc.

According to this report, the east German and satellite governments were advised to "observe reticence" toward the Korean situation until the course of developments is clear.

German Communists were said to have been instructed to apply the lessons learned in Korea to the "active fight" for the unification of Germany."

Johnson Gives Witness Cues

Secretary of Defense Johnson charted a course yesterday for military men called to testify before congressional committees.

"You have a responsibility to give not only the official views of the agency you represent, but your own honest convictions," Johnson said.

"But," he added, "once a decision has been made, discipline demands that you act upon the decision, energetically and wholeheartedly as if it were the result of your own personal recommendation."

The Defense Secretary, who, himself, frequently goes before Congress in behalf of legislation affecting the Nation's military and security programs, touched on this subject in a speech prepared for graduation exercises at the Industrial College of the Armed Forces.

Johnson said eight members of the graduating class will go to work today in his office. The college instructs officers in the armed forces in problems relating to industrial production and supply in meeting military needs. This year, for the first time, it also is being attended by civilians from some Government agencies.

The Defense Secretary made no mention in his prepared address of the current crisis in Korea. But in recalling the part past graduates of the college played in World War II, he said:

"I hope and pray that there will be no war that will accelerate your promotion.

"Moreover, I am convinced that we will have no war if we continue our way of strengthening our military forces, maintaining the stability of our economy, and remaining true to our fundamental principles and ideals."

Johnson said that the United States is doing an "outstanding job" in developing new weapons but he warned that "it is nip and tuck between ourselves and our possible enemies in this vital race."

Koreans Have Fought Invasions 2000 Years

By Stanley Johnson
Associated Press Reporter

Korea, a country whose native name means "morning calm," has been little but strife since its recorded history began in 57 B. C.

The 600-mile long, 135 mile-wide peninsula extends southward from Manchuria between the Yellow Sea and the Sea of Japan to within 120 miles of Japan.

For 2000 years invaders from the north, east and west have fought for possession of well-watered, temperate Korea, whose fertile fields are protected from Manchurian and Pacific winds by a rugged mountain chain.

Despite these invasions, the Korean people have maintained a physical appearance, a complex language, and customs wholly different from their Chinese, Japanese and northern Asiatic neighbors.

They average five feet, four and one-half inches in height, have dark, straight hair, and slightly upturned eyes.

Korean folklore says the nation owes its birth to a divine being who came to earth in the form of a wind. Finding a virgin sitting beside a stream he blew upon her and she brought forth a son, Tangun, who supposedly founded a dynasty which lasted from 2333 B. C. to 1122 B. C.

Only from 57 B. C., however, with the establishment of the kingdom of Silla in South Korea are there accurate records of the country.

Internal warfare among Silla and other Korean regimes lasted until the brief Mongol invasion of 1231 A. D.

In 1392 Gen. Yi Taicho drove out Japanese pirates ravaging the east coast and founded the kingdom of Chosen, which included most of the 86,000 square miles of modern Korea.

He made Seoul, still Korea's chief city, his capital.

Pyongyang, today the capital of Communist North Korea, had been the center of Korean civilization up to that time.

The Japanese sent an army of 300,000 to conquer the country in 1592 but were finally routed. A Korean-invented-and-built ironclad warship helped.

Manchu hordes swept down on the land in 1627, devastating the country.

Korea's modern history begins with an American attack on the country in 1871.

A United States Navy flotilla was sent to open trade between the two countries. Repulsed, the fleet opened fire, a force was sent ashore and more than 300 Korean soldiers were killed.

Friendly relations were established in 1883 when the United States and Korea signed a mutual aid pact.

The next year an American, Judge O. N. Denny, became advisor to the Korean foreign office. Other foreigners—mostly British and American—gained positions of influence. Chinese, Japanese and Russians were rigidly excluded.

Early in 1894 Korea asked China for help in putting down bandits. Japan used this as a pretext to invade the country, claiming that China was taking over.

Modern, industrialized Japan won the war.

President Theodore Roosevelt assured the Japanese at the treaty of Portsmouth (N. M.), which ended the Russo-Japanese War of 1904-05 that the United States would not object to Japanese rule in Korea.

Japan formally annexed Korea in 1910 and seized land, fisheries, mines, and the personal wealth of Koreans.

More than one million fled to try to make a living in Siberia and Manchuria.

The Koreans, spurred by President Wilson's famous 14 points after World War I, proclaimed their independence. The Japaneseo tortured thei rleaders t death but others sprang up and formed a secret provisional government in Seoul.

They elected Dr. Syngman Rhee, now President of South Korea, to head the government. He was then in the United States. Rhee had been a pupil of Wilson at Princeton University.

Rhee established a permanent Korean commission at Washington in 1922 and kept up a fight for Korean freedom until World War II ended. Korean independence was an American aim in the war.

Military authorities said that to enable Russian troops from the North and American troops from the South to crush an estimated 178,000 Japanese garrison troops between them, Korea was divided into American and Soviet zones of influence at the 38th parallel.

The division is generally believed to have been agreed on at the Roosevelt - Stalin - Churchill Yalta meeting in February, 1945, but the details were never made public.

The original agreement was to be followed by the creation of an all-Korean government under joint Soviet-American sponsorship.

Russia refused to carry out her part of the agreement.

A joint Soviet-American military commission was then agreed on at the Moscow foreign ministers' conference in 1945, but exploded when Russia demanded that all anti-communist Koreans be banned from political activity.

The United States put the question of Korea before the United Nations in 1947.

A U. N. commission returned from Korea reporting that Russian-dominated North Korea had refused to cooperate in efforts to unify the country.

The U. N. then ordered elections. The North refused to take part. Two-thirds of Korea's 30,000 people in the South elected 200 representatives and left 100 seats vacant in case the North should decide to participate.

The U. N.-sponsored republic of Korea, based on these elections, was inaugurated August 15, 1948. Russia vetoed its application for membership in the United Nations.

At almost the same time, North Korea declared itself a people's democratic republic and claimed jurisdiction over the whole peninsula.

Russia announced in December, 1948, that it had withdrawn its troops from North Korea; the United States evacuated South Korea under U. N. observation in January, 1949.

Tension between the two sections of the divided country increased.

that American military forces are acting "aggressively," for the orders to MacArthur bar United States warships from operating in Korean waters north of the Thirty-eighth Parallel, and ban Air Force or Navy planes bombing or strafing across the border.

Decisive Steps Possible

Operating over South Korea or in the waters nearby, however, they should be able to take these decisive roles in the South Korean fighting:

1. Drive the North Korean air force from the skies over the present battlefield. USAF spokesmen yesterday estimated it as amounting to little more than 100 World War II-type ground support planes—Soviet Yaks and IL-10s and Jap Zeros. Against this, MacArthur can throw well over 600 modern aircraft, including 400 jet fighters.

2. They should turn the tide of the ground fighting in South Korea, not only by blasting the Communist invaders but also by boosting the fighting spirit of the defenders.

While Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson and other officials said no soldiers or Marines will be thrown into the ground fighting, there is no absolute bar against this being done later, if necessary, under the same restrictions of the American air and naval participation.

3. Presence of the United States Far Eastern Fleet in Korean waters rules out any further North Korean amphibious attacks, officials said. Our destroyers and patrol craft could easily block the sort of landings already made from fishing smacks and barges and can put those beachheads out of operations by bombardment.

A fourth such landing reported yesterday by an Army spokesman—made by 1000 troops near Fusan—threatened rail connections between this major southeastern port and the north and required the diversion of a badly needed South Korean regiment. These landings had been ominously suggestive of the way the Japs took Luzon in 1942.

Air Force spokesmen yesterday said all of their planes are capable of carrying out missions against the North Korean forces south of the border from available basesc in Japan. It was thought likely here that Lieut. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, MacArthur's Air Force commander, would operate his jet F-80 Shooting Stars and piston-engined F-51s and B-26s from Jap fields.

There are only two airfields in South Korea capable of handling such craft—if fuel, bombs, mechanics, etc., were moved in. One is Kimpo Airport, near Seoul, which has been under attack, and Fusan, far to the south. There are some rough strips scattered elsewhere, which are available for emergency landings.

Stratemeyer, the Air Force said yesterday, has five groups of fighters almost completely converted from F-51s to F-80 jets. Each group has 75 aircraft. There is also a night fighter group of F-82s, two squadrons of B-26 light bombers, each with 16 planes, and a 30-plane B-29 group based at Guam.

There is also a group of C-54 troop carrier planes. These various units are based in Japan, the Marianas, the Philippines and Okinawa. Spokesmen said there are no plans to send additional Air Force groups from the United States. Large numbers of the F-80s, it is reported, were shipped to the Far East only in recent weeks.

The Navy spokesman said Vice Admiral Arthur D. Struble's Seventh Fleet has been transferred to General MacArthur's operational control and merged with his Far Eastern naval forces. Vice Admiral Charles T. Joy, commander of the latter force, takes command of the consolidated fleet. It consists of: the Essex-type carrier Valley Forge, heavy cruiser Rochester, light cruiser Juneau, 12 destroyers, four submarines, a seaplane tender, destroyer tender, tanker, store ship, high-speed transport, submarine rescue craft and a fleet tug.

Pacific Fleet Headquarters at Pearl Harbor announced that a task force, consisting of the 27,000-ton carrier Philippine Sea, two cruisers and a destroyer squadron will be moved from the West Coast to the Hawaiian area.

A Navy spokesman in Washington said some destroyers and lighter craft will be shifted to the Far East and that the carrier Boxer, scheduled for overhaul, will be held in readiness on the West Coast. Roughly, he said, about one-third of the Pacific fleet will be kept at West Coast bases, and the rest in the middle or western Pacific, under the move.

There are no present plans to transfer any ships from the Atlantic to the Pacific or take ships out of mothballs, he said.

The spokesman also said that a division of destroyers was due to form a screen between Formosa and the Chinese mainland by Monday night and that the rest of the fleet should already be in position from Formosa to Korea. Planes from the Valley Forge, which include jet fighters, are available to support Korean ground troops if called upon by Stratemeyer, the Navy official said.

Good flying weather is expected from now through October, which should permit the air forces to put on a maximum effort, if required.

Though use of Army troops is not contemplated, there are 123,500 soldiers under MacArthur's command. This includes four divisions—the First Cavalry, Seventh, Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth Infantry.

President Truman's orders to give all-out aid to the South Koreans were passed to General MacArthur Monday night. From 10:17 to nearly midnight, top Pentagon officials "talked" to MacArthur by "telecom"—two-way teletype communication. Taking part were Army Secretary Frank Pace, Air Force Secretary Thomas K. Finletter, and uniformed heads of the Army, Navy and Air Force, Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg and Adm. Forrest P. Sherman.

Spokesmen said MacArthur was given a broad mission to secure South Korea and Formosa, with the details of how to do it largely left to him.

At yesterday's morning "briefing" for reporters, Pentagon spokesmen said four South Korean divisions were in action around Seoul. They had no word of the recapture of the key town of Uijongbu, but said reports indicated the South Korean forces in the field "are fighting" and there is no information about any units being demoralized or in hasty retreat.

They told, however, of the evacuation by sea of the remnants of the regiment trapped on Ongjin peninsula, largely without their equipment. One battalion headed north across the border and presumably is "pocketed."

A spokesman also reported that all of the Korean government except the military high command had evacuated Seoul. Their reports showed Ambassador Muccio and the American military group also remained in the capital. This apparently was before the counter-attack that relieved the pressure on Seoul and the Government apparently returned. They had no later reports of the fighting at the 12:30 and 3 p. m. briefings.

Officials gave this report on the status of evacuation of dependents and other noncombatants:

Six hundred and eighty-two dependents left Inchow by ship; June 26; 203 civilian employes air-evacuated from Kimpo June 27; 104 dependents slated to leave Fusan June 27; 250 dependents to be air-evacuated from Kimpo and 313 noncombatants to be air-lifted from Suouwan beginning June 27; 275 men moving to Fusan by motor for evacuation; another 125 Americans—not dependents—scheduled for evacuation from Fusan "later".

THE TERRAIN—The difficult passages that confront the opposing Korean armies is indicated by the above relief map of Korea. The eastern coast is rocky and steep. The western and southern coasts are fringed by bays and islands. Most of the rivers rise in the mountains in the east and flow westward and southward. Seoul, capital of South Korea, is marked this was merely a precautionary measure.

Bolling and Andrews Tighten Regulations

A check of other military installations in the Washington area showed the restricting directive was issued too late to have immediate effect.

Officials at the Quantico Marine Base and Fort Belvoir, Va., said they had just learned of the directive, while at Fort George G. Meade, Md., officials said no word had come down from Second Army hedquarters.

At the Pentagon, official spokesmen said present regulations require "picture passes" to identify employes after 6 p.m. weekdays and on Saturday and Sunday. This identification system, it was pointed out, could be extended immediately for full-time operation if the Pentagon ordered it.

Civil Defense Measure

A measure authorizing creation of a District Office of Civil Defense has been sought by the District Commissioners for nearly three months.

The bill would permit the Commissioners to create a new agency to prepare an overall plan for protecting Washington in event of enemy attack or other disaster.

An interim committee, headed by Police Inspector John Fondahl, has been making preliminary studies for a local defense program in cooperation with the National Security Resources Board. But the Commissioners feel the situation calls for a permanent setup with a specialized staff to conduct comprehensive planning.

The Commissioners have made two unsuccessful attempts at the Capitol to get a special appropriation to finance the proposed civilion preparedness program.

Several weeks ago the House Appropriations Committee knocked out a $10,000 request to set up a civil defense office on grounds there was no enabling legislation authorizing such an emergency.

Only recently District officials made an urgent plea for $30,000 for the same purpose before the Senate Appropriations Committee. This, too, was stricken from the city supply bill for the year starting July 1, presumably on the same basis of no legislative authority such as the McMillan bill would provide.

Meanwhile, Virginia's Governor John S. Battle brought his State into the preparedness picture by declaring the Korean incident "points up the vital necessity of organizing our civilian defenses."

Governor Battle stated Virginia already has been cooperating with a request by Federal authorities to organize and man with civilian volunteers a network of aircraft warning observation posts in about 50 counties.

"We are pursuing that course as vigorously as possible," Battle said, referring to civilian defense. "I am confident that the citizens of Virginia will gladly patricipate in this program when called upon to do so."

Unofficially Alerted

The Korean situation also focused attention on the National Guard, and last night Air Force spokesmen admitted that some unit commanders of the Air Guard had unofficially alerted their men after the announcement of the Korean attack.

High officials in the District, Maryland and Virginia National Guard stressed that no mobilization call had been issued here or is deemed "likely."

They said more than 12,000 guardsmen in Washington, Virginia and Maryland stand ready for immediate service if President Truman activates the guard.

Guard leaders were reticent about what immediate steps they would take should the M-Day call go out, but were confident that their units could be assembled on 24 hours' notice.

In Washington, guard headquarters said there are "roughly 2500" men who would be assembled within a very short time. Air units here are the 113th Fighter Group Headquarters; 113th Fighter Squadron; 213th Air Service Group; 121st Utility group. Ground units are Headquarters D. C. National Guard; 260th Anti-Aircraft Headquarters Group; 260th AAA Gun Battalion; 340th Anti-Aircraft Air-warning Battalion; 380th AAAW battalion; and the 163d and 171st Military Police Battalions.

The men participated in maneuvers last summer and since have had weekly drills. There was no official comment on possible concentration points, number of available planes, or order in which officials thought units might be called.

In Virginia, Maj. Gen. S. Gardner Waller, State Adjustant General, estimated guard troops at 5398 officers and enlisted men, who he said could be assembled "almost as soon as orders can be sent to their commanders."

General Waller predicted that if an emergency developed similar to that in World War II, Virginia's air and antiaircraft units would get first call. He said a fighter squadron is placed at Byrd field. The State also has the 176th Infantry Combat Team and the 116th Infantry Regiment, with companies, battalions and service units scattered from Big Stone Gap to Accomack, he said.

General Waller pointed out that all units are motorized for quick concentration.

In Maryland, Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, Adjutant General, said the State's strength is about 5000 National Guardsmen, most of them in units which are components of the Twenty-ninth Infantry Division. Other units in the State Guard organization include the 702d Anti-Aircraft Artillery Battalion and the 231st Transportation Corps Truck Battalion. The Air National Guard includes the 104th Fighter Squadron and an air service group.

The war clouds in the Far East added an ominous undertone to the announcement that Washington this fall will be the site of an anti-aircraft defense against air attack.

Second Army headquarters at Fort Meade set no date for the field exercise, nicknamed "Metro," but said it will last 20 to 25 days.

Gunners for Exercise Metro will be the Thirty-fifth Anti-Aircraft Brigade, stationed at Fort Meade and commanded by Brig. Gen. R. W. Berry.

A Second Army spokesman said it was hoped the Air Force will participate in simulated air attacks. There will not be any firing of anti-aircraft weapons, the spokesman added.

Installations will be set up in Maryland and Virginia areas as well as the District itself.

An initial step in planning the tactical exercise will be the leasing of some commercial telephone lines in the Washington area to supplement Army communication systems.

The communication operation is to report, track and fire at mythical invader planes.

The Second Army's announcement of Exercise Metro reported that the program is in line with the overall policy of the Defense Department to give various phases of training at strategic points in the Nation.

The questions to be solved, the announcement said, are "problems that might be entailed in the defense of a large metropolitan area," including the supplying of troops.

Yesterday's threatening headlines resulted in increased telephone calls to service recruiting offices for information about enlistments and commissions. Many of the callers were reserves who wanted to know if they could return to service with their old ratings.

The recruiting office personnel said they expected even more calls today on the heels of President Truman's decision to send naval and air forces against the North Koreans.

Congress Supports Truman in Crisis

mediate Senate agreement to vote on the $1,222,500,000 military assistance authorization.

Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.), objected to a MAP vote today or Thursday on the ground that some interested Senators might be absent but proposed a vote at 2 p. m. Friday.

Lucas complained that this would hold up approval three days, and said he still hoped the Senate would vote today.

"This is serious business we are in," said Lucas. "I would like to close ranks and vote as soon as possible . . . Those who delay the vote . . . will have to assume the responsibility for it."

Adjourn by July 31

After a Senate Democratic policy committee meeting, Lucas told reporters he did not know of any proposal to implement House-passed military appropriations or MAP funds now in the works, but "everything will depend on developments."

He said adjournment also will "depend on developments," but he still hoped for Congress to adjourn by July 31.

"I don't want to be put in the position of saying we are going to have a war, because I don't think we are," he repeatedly stressed.

He termed a Chicago Tribune editorial suggesting that the President is trying to create a war "asinine" and "ridiculous."

"What he is doing is trying to keep out of war," said the Senate leader.

During the Senate debate that followed the White House announcement, Senator William F Knowland (R., Calif.), said it was essential that the President "draw the line" that he did in the Far East.

Knowland in Favor

"He should have the overwhelming support of all Americans, regardless of their partisan affiliation," said Knowland.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. (R., Mass.) told the Senate he would support "firm leadership to retrieve what has been lost in Korea." In addition to using ships and planes, Lodge said "we should not shrink from using the Army if that is what the best military judgment indicates."

Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.) compared our stand in the Far East to "the stand we have taken in the Atlantic area" and said "all of us" should back it up.

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.), said the President is clearly acting within his constitutional powers and "at long last" we have pulled the rug out from under "false, lying Communist propaganda" that the United States would not come to the aid of freedom-loving peoples.

Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.), ranking minority member of the Appropriations Committee, and Senator Leverett P. Saltonstall (R., Mass.) of the Armed Services Committee also publicly backed up the President's stand.

Senator Kem had just finished a speech in which he charged the United States is "reaping the tragic harvest of Yalta" because Yalta agreements "split Korea in half."

Kem Questions Lucas

When Lucas read the President's statement, Kem asked if the President "has arrogated to himself the authority of declaring war." He said the Constitution gives Congress that authority and asked Lucas to "elucidate."

Lucas said he did not care to debate the question but that on 126 different occasions in our history the Presdent has authorized use of troops "to do certain things."

The Illinois Senator said Kem had shifted from "talking about the dust settling in the Far East" to charging the President "declared war," and added:

"So it does not make any difference what the President may do—I doubt if it would satisfy the Senator from Missouri."

Senator Watkins said it might be the right thing to do, but it seemed to him "in effect war or a step leading to war." Watkins said the President should have sent a message to Congress asking authority for the action he took.

When Watkins later said he did not think the President had authority under the United Nations charter to proceed as he did, Lucas replied shortly:

"Well, it's been done."

In answer to a question from Senator John Bricker (R., Ohio), Lucas said negotiations are under way to get other nations to join the United States in armed support of South Korean forces.

Lucas declined to expand, saying: "I can't go any further than that."

In the House, the only really discordant note came from Marcantonio. The American-Laborite charged "the power of Congress to declare war has been usurped from us." He said "we are at war with the northern government of Korea" and predicted the President's decision may have "disastrous consequences on the people of the United States unless checked by the people themselves."

Representative Hugh D. Scott (R., Pa.) needled the President for having recently said we were closer to peace than at any time in the last five years.

And Senate GOP Leader Wherry hit indirectly at past foreign policies by saying he was glad the Administration "is finally drawing the line" nd is "stopping its vacillating policies."

Replying to some of the critics, Connally told the Senate this is no time for "carping."

Truman to Address Reservists Today

President Truman and Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson will address the national convention of the Reserve Officers Association of the United States this morning.

About 600 delegates, representing 75,000 reserve officers of all services, will hear the talks, opening events of a week-long meeting at the Mayflower Hotel. The convention theme this year is "Reservists ask only the right to be ready."

President Truman, who organized one of the first ROA chapters in Kansas City after World War I, is scheduled to speak at 10 a. m. He will be followed by Secretary Johnson, who will deliver the keynote address.

Friday evening, Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, jr., will address a formal banquet and on Saturday the convention will wind up with election of officers.

Yesterday, the ROA national officers placed a wreath on the grave of the late Secretary of Defense James A. Forestal. Chaplain Maurice Sheehy led a prayer and Commander J. P. Bracken, USNR, of Washington, ROA president, spoke briefly.

Press Supports Truman Action

have begun to despair of Western aid."

The New York Herald Tribune: "This newspaper is convinced that the American people, bewildered and baffled . . . will respond with a sense of quiet relief, verging on enthusiasm. This newspaper is also convinced . . . that the result of the President's crisp orders . . . will not be another major war but a major contribution toward a reasonably stable international system."

Backed by People

Boston Herald—"President Truman will have the whole-hearted backing of the American people in his employment of force to prevent the expansion of Communist aggression in Korea. Although he was careful not to order direct participation of American forces in turning the North Korean (Communist) invaders back beyond their border, short of a United Nations order to do so, it was clear from the Sunday action of the Security Council that the non-Communist peoples of the world would also support a firm stand against the most overt Communist aggression to date. . . . The only possible reply is that which the President so quickly supplied: Stand fast."

The Chicago Tribune and the Washington Times-Herald: "Mr. Truman's statement on Korea is an illegal declaration of war . . . It is beside the point to say that Congress may or will back Mr. Truman. The fact is that Congress has not been consulted. . . . Mr. Truman's political fortunes are in a bad way. He can use a war just as Mr. Roosevelt needed one in the midst of the Roosevelt depression of the late '30's."

The Providence Journal: "As to Korea, we entirely and wholeheartedly support the policy of American military intervention announced yesterday by President Truman. As to Formosa and especially Indo-China, we cannot similarly indorse the extension of that policy . . .

"In Korea, the Russians violated the most elementary standards of international morality . . . that is aggression, naked and ugly . . .

"It seems to us that the moral tone in our policy would have remained clearer if we had confined our action in the present crisis to intervention in Korea. . . . We are not ready to risk the adverse reaction of Asia to our further ventures elsewhere in the Pacific. . . ."

Gamble by Truman Seen

The New York Daily News: "How well advised Mr. Truman was, we have no means of knowing. . . . He is gambling on the hope that the Russians will back down, as they did when the Western Powers finally got tough and hardboiled in Berlin. . . . For the sake of the Nation—for the sake of the world, indeed—let us hope the President has gone into this gigantic gamble with his eyes open and a fair chance to win."

The New York Daily Mirror: "Americans will be reassured to know that all action was taken in full consultation with General MacArthur. . . . The United States is acting to fulfill the responsibility of the United Nations to protect the peace of the world and a country in distress. . . . This is a very bad situation—and let us face it with courage, wisdom and forbearance."

Momentous Gamble

The Baltimore Sun: "By the decision of the President of the United States we are now committed to defend the Republic of (South) Korea against the Red Invaders from the north.

"We are thus embarked on a momentous gamble. What we hope, of course, is that by displaying our areteeth in this particular area, we and the rest of the world may be saved the tragic cost of an all-out war with Russia."

The Louisville Courier-Journal: "This country has promised independent self-government to South Korea. All the rest of Asia which remains outside the Soviet system must be watching to learn whether the United States means what it says, or whether we will let Korea go by default. If we do, it will be an invitation for Indo-China, for Burma, for India and Pakistan eventually to cease resistance to Communist advances.

"President Truman made it quite clear . . . that the United States is determined to fasten down everything in the Pacific area. Unless the shoplifter is prepared to try his hand at outright banditry, the Korean incident will collapse."

Boston Globe—The decisions announced in Washington (15 hours after orders were issued to implement them) . . . mean that a force is being thrown into the balance on the Korean peninsula which the invading forces cannot, unless heavily reinforced from other than their own resources in Asia, for long withstand. Whether the Kremlin will see fit to provide such aid is a question time alone will answer.

"Moscow seems to have miscalculated both the strength and the resolution of the remainder of the world, as well as its intelligence and its will to survive. . . . This latest chapter may presage a decision for Russian withdrawal from Lake Success, bag and baggage.

The Hartford (Conn.) Courant: "President Truman yesterday irrevocably committed the American Air Force and Navy to the fighting in Korea XXX. If the Kremlin chooses, this could be at best another Spain, at worst World War III. But there is every reason to expect that yesterday's action will save the day for peace. In any case, what Mr. Truman did was right. And the fact that he acted with resolution and speed is in itself as important as the action taken."

Memphis Commercial Appeal: "Now that the die has been cast, the supremely important thing is to close ranks behind President Truman, regardless of party or domestic considerations, and show the world we are right with him on this one. . . . Any appearance of division will unquestionably be interpreted abroad as a sign that we are uncertain and afraid, unequal to the task before us."

Columbus Dispatch: "The American intervention, so far, is aimed solely at helping to drive the invaders back north of the 38th parallel. But, while the President's order will be widely approved, thoughtful observers will wish that steps might have been taken sooner; that would have made such an overt act unnecessary."

Ohio State Journal, (Columbus): "President Truman has made a momentous move. We hope it is a wise one. It will take a great deal of undoing to make up for the mistakes of Tehran, Yalta and Potsdam. We only hope it will not be too costly and that we have learned something for the future in our dealings with Soviet Russia and other totalitarian States."

Chicago Sun-Times: "A good beginning has been made by President Truman. He has pledged full United States support of United Nations efforts to end what this Nation calls 'unprovoked aggression.' The President has spoken boldly but thoughtfully. In the cause of world peace the responsibility lies on him to avoid rash statements and rash actions while firmly pressing the powers of the United Nations."

Charlotte (N. C.) Observer: "The armed invasion of peaceful South Korea was but a bold and arrogant move on the part of Soviet Russia . . . The United States could not have afforded to stand idly by as a looked-on and permit the conquest of the new anti-Communist Republic whose creation we had sponsored . . . "

New Orleans States—"It was the only action left the United States could have taken to save Asia from eventual communism . . . The sea support we can offer may be adequate right now . . . It must be supplemented immediately from the fleet that is now in the deep freeze . . . Why weren't we better prepared for this invasion? We had ben warned through our Central Intelligence Agency . . . We were caught flat-footed again . . . What explanation has Mr. Aceson for what has happened and for why it happened in this country we created?"

Strengthened Draft

Senate-House conferees responded promptly and properly to the increased military danger by approving a draft extension minus delaying restrictions. Under terms of the compromise bill, the President will be empowered to call up men whenever the situation warrants. This is an extraordinary power, but the world situation is extraordinary; and in any case the grant can be reviewed at the end of one year. Surely the abandonment of efforts to condition the draft on a prior congressional declaration of a national emergency is a realistic appraisal of the suddenness with which conscription might be needed. The compromise is a healthy sign of solidarity and congressional ability to act fast. Likewise, conferees were wise to give the President authority to call the National Guard and reserves to active duty, though they did well to emphasize that this is not a directive, but merely a form of insurance. The challenge, as the conferees apparently have recognized, is not to get excited and fly off in all directions, but to keep our powder ready.

More Military Aid

Tension over Korea has cut short the debate in the Senate on the new military aid bill. Fortunately, as Senators prepare to vote they can be guided by a comprehensive report of the combined Foreign Relations and Armed Services Committees. Although the Administration's request for $1,222,500,000 has been approved in full, the bill has been tightened up in several particulars. The joint committee report strikes a balance in recognizing that "economic soundness and defensive strength are concomitant factors in a program of North Atlantic security." Careful analysis, it says, shows that the participating countries "can absorb military assistance without economic dislocation or inflationary damage."

Last year's act has been amended in details to take account of experience. For example, the restriction limiting the furnishing of production equipment to machine tools has been eliminated to permit other countries to receive a broader range of machinery with which to expand their own efforts. Another point of confusion has been dispelled in the provision which would permit countries named in the act not only to receive arms aid, but to buy arms when they are able to do so. Likewise, such purchases may be made at fair current value rather than at original cost.

Under the new bill the President is empowered to divert up to 10 percent of the total funds to any European nation threatened by aggression and vital to North Atlantic security. This provision seems to point at Yugoslavia, and it is well warranted. However, whether the limitation on diversion of such funds to a country in Europe is a wise one is questionable in light of Korean experience. The committees also have required that all but $7,500,000 of the 75 million dollars authorized to be spent in the general area of China be accounted for to Congress.

There is still a disturbing element of the blank check in the section which permits the sale of arms to nations "of strategic importance to the United States" outside the Atlantic Pact, and the danger is increased by the additional provision that such countries need not pay all cash in advance. The bill requires that Congress be notified of such sales. This, however, is a flimsy protection against the scattering of arms to backward nations which have no business buying them, and Congress will have to keep a close scrutiny to insure that the purpose of the act is not abused.

Aside from this weak spot, the bill goes far toward placing the arms program in perspective. It makes short shrift of the effort to channel ECA counterpart funds into arms purchases. It emphasizes the essentially peaceful and defensive aspects of MAP. It also takes account of the probable changes in requirements to be wrought by the new weapons. "These new weapons of defense," it says, "give us greater assurance that our plans can be carried out successfully without the necessity of matching the enemy division for division, tank for tank or man for man."

One conspicuous omission from the new bill is the former requirement that funds be withheld until there is agreement on collective defense measures. This is in recognition of the substantial progress so far—progress which the report says "has been unexpectedly good." In the last analysis, of course, Congress cannot do more than provide the tools for the balanced collective defense that is sought. How well that defense is integrated, how equitably individual countries participate, whether plans are grounded in realistic new concepts rather than merely in traditions—all this depends on the North Atlantic Council and the defense committees. The responsibility for welding this machinery into a smoothly functioning overall unit is an awesome one.

MacArthur's Role

Through an inadvertence General MacArthur's name was omitted from a reference in an editorial yesterday to the United States obligation toward Korea. That reference was to a statement made by General MacArthur to President Rhee in October, 1948, in which the general affirmed that he personally would protect Korea "as I would protect the United States." We put this statement in the mouth of John Foster Dulles. The statement was made, to be sure, before the withdrawal of American occupation troops from Korea last summer —a withdrawal which the independence-conscious Koreans themselves had urged. However, the American obligation has now been reasserted by the ordering of American planes and sea forces to the support of the South Koreans.

By terms of the President's order, General MacArthur overnight has assumed the pivotal role not only as the defender of Japan, but also of Korea and Formosa. In addition to his authority as American commander in chief in the Far East, he has now been given control of the Seventh Fleet, which will have the decisive part in preventing invasion of Formosa by the Chinese Communists. With respect to Korea, he is in a sense acting as a sort of United Nations commander, since the United Nations has authorized all nations to come to Korea's aid.

One of the four American divisions now in Japan presumably could be diverted to the task of defeating aggression in case it were needed. But so far reliance is being placed upon Korean ground forces reinforced by American air and sea power. The most compelling need is for air cover—planes to meet the Russian-supplied Yak fighters and some means of stopping the World War II Japanese tanks which the Communists are employing with considerable success. Fortunately, the reports are that General MacArthur has plenty of materiel to back up the Koreans.

By hindsight, it is of course a grave misfortune that more materiel was not sent to Korea before the invasion. There were many reasons for this, one of which was the stress on building an internal security force in Korea instead of a force to meet full-fledged aggression. This was an earnest of the pacific intentions of both the United States and South Korea. The dilemma in Korea, as indeed it is everywhere, was so to condition American aid as not to precipitate attack. Evaluation of the threat in Korea was made difficult, moreover, by the fact that the same Communist forces which began the invasion had been poised for 18 months and had engaged in numerous border skirmishes involving as many as 1500 men. The big problem now, as never before, is to appraise Communist intentions accurately without spreading our forces thin over the world and creating the state of perpetual alarm on which the Communists thrive.

Vote Pandering

The reckless manner in which the House overrode the President's veto of the pay bonus for World War II veterans in the postal service must be matched against the paralysis of both houses when it comes to voting postal reforms. A few days ago the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report directed attention to the fact that a year has passed since President Truman sent to Congress his nine-point program for reorganization of the postal system. Nothing has come of it. Congress has ignored its opportunity to effect economies and improve the postal service. Instead, the House tries to throw sand into the gears of the department in an attempt to win petty political advantages for its own members.

When small groups of legislators have given serious thought to the postal service, they have usually come forth with constructive action. A five-man Senate subcommittee conducted hearings, for example, on the key measure of the President's program, which would end Senate confirmation of postmasters and place them fully under civil service. No opposition appeared and the bill was given the indorsement of the entire bipartisan Hoover Commission, Postmaster General Donaldson, and the National Association of Postmasters and Postal Employes. The subcommittee reported the bill favorably, but the full Senate Postoffice and Civil Service Committee put it on the shelf.

On Monday the House Postoffice and Civil Service Committee approved a bill to overhaul the postal accounting system in partial conformity to the suggestions of the Hoover Commission. With the Eighty-first Congress eager to wind up its work, however, the chance for any action being taken on the bill seems slender. It is impossible to avoid the conclusion that the House has flouted its basic responsibility to this enormous governmental enterprise while trying to dump upon the postal service the burden of a vote-getting device. For 114 Democratic members, including some supposedly stalwart leaders, to run out on the Administration on this issue is an especially shameful performance.

The Senate can still arrest this sordid appeal to a relatively small special-interest group. It is less vulnerable than the House to political pressures, and often it is more responsive to national interests. In the face of our new national emergency, the Senate could not repudiate the President on this issue without exposing itself to contempt on the part of that large body of citizens who place the national interest above petty politicking.

Stating The American Position

President Truman has given the free world the leadership of which yesterday it stood in desperate need. No notice had been taken of the cease-fire order of the United Nations. Korea as the child of the United Nations looked on the verge of extinction. That would have been an intolerable affront to the free world, and Mr. Truman has taken steps in fulfillment of the American obligation to the United Nations to prevent it. The United States has moved in anticipation of further action by the U. N. in dealing with the flouting of its cease-fire and withdrawal resolution. No doubt the peace-loving members will applaud the American initiative and take whatever concurrent steps that are available to them as the only way of saving the United Nations as well as Korea.

The exhilarating lead provided by President Truman responds, to our view, to the deepest instincts of the American people. They are simply tired of being pushed around. They fought two wars not for the sake of survival but in the hope of building a better world. Since the last war they have assumed the responsibility of keeping the peace and reconstructing and renovating a peaceful order of society in the face of sloth and war-weariness and a monstrous aggression. It has been an uphill task which would be doomed to failure if Korea were lost. It has almost seemed in the last two days as if the American people were crying for leadership to call a halt to the backsliding and to state the American position anew.

The brazen invasion of Southern Korea seemed to arouse in them not the hysteria of a war fever but a grim readiness to see that the aggressor did not get away with it. This must have been communicated to the President. At any rate, his declaration has a directness and a strength which come, it seems to us, from an expectant public opinion. He sensed, moreover, the need at the same time to put on the line the American intention on potential danger spots in the Far East which are now subject to an added menace by the explosion in Korea. For want of a policy the American position in the Far East has been in a state of crumbling deterioration. Without action on Korea there would be no prestige left for America, and all the talk about a new Japanese-American relation would be mere sound and fury signifying nothing.

What the President says on Formosa has a pith and a meaning which could not have been improved. It is as deft as it is clear and austere. It expresses what has so long been wanted—an independent policy on Formosa, or one that does not tie American policy to Chiang's coattails. The dilemma in Formosa has been to prevent the capture of Formosa and at the same time put Formosa out of action as the Chinese Nationalist base for attacking the mainland of China. There has been the added need to remind the world in general and the Far East in particular that the status of Formosa, still a Japanese possession, is still unsettled. All this has been compressed into four simple but pregnant sentences. We repeat them, for they are historic and a model of forthrightness:

> Accordingly I have ordered the Seventh Fleet to prevent any attack on Formosa. As a corollary of this action I am calling upon the Chinese government on Formosa to cease all air and sea operations against the mainland. The Seventh Fleet will see that this is done. The determination of the future status of Formosa must await the restoration of security in the Pacific, a peace settlement with Japan, or consideration by the United Nations.

The Seventh Fleet will see that this is done. This sentence has a steely but nonbelligerent content which will put the aggressor on notice that the United States has reached the end of its patience with the monkey business of the aggressors. The pledge of action in the Philippines was even more obligatory than action in Formosa because of the special tie which binds the Philippines to the United States. We could have wished that the President had stopped there, for intermeddling is foolish and dangerpus in Asiatic mainland affairs, particularly in view of America's commitments elsewhere. Indeed, there is a certain inconsistency in telling Chiang Kai-shek to quit harrying the mainland of China and the decision to intervene in Indo-China on the side of imperial France. But even in this respect a policy is better than a half-policy or no policy at all.

Any riposte from Moscow will be awaited without trepidation. No soft fear lays hold of anybody who had a hand in yesterday's decision. There is now a oneness in the Government, and it looks as if Congress also has closed ranks, except for the mavericks, behind the President. Three times the United States has met challenges that the masters of the Kremlin have flung in the face of the free world; in Iran, in Berlin, in Greece. Three times, by God's good grace, the line has been held, and the Russian aggressors have been compelled to quit. What has been done three times can be done and must be done a fourth time.

Available to Soviet Russia is an "out," viz, a quiet dropping of inspiration and support for the North Korean adventurers, and world peace will be saved. If Soviet action is a bluff, it will have been called. If it is more than that, we shall soon see, and there will be no shrinking from the consequences. These are days calling for steady nerves, for a strict eye on the ball, and for a renewed resolve to keep our purposes pure in the grapple we have undertaken with men who would plunge the world into darkness. The occasion has found the man in Harry Truman.

U. S. Test In Crisis

By Malvina Lindsay

Stockpile Of Nerves

PEOPLE ASK, "What do you think of the war?" You remember the same question, idly and complacently bandied about in September, 1939, when Hitler marched into Poland. But now it has an anxious undertone. In a decade Americans have learned that bloodshed anywhere, even on a road of unpronounceable name in distant Korea, reaches into their lives.

Even if this is no more than another localized crisis in the cold war, it has emphasized again to Americans the danger of their powder-keg living — a living that Secretary Acheson has said calls for steady and calm nerves.

How is our stockpile of nerves? What "situation of strength" do we have on the human front?

You think of the elements of American strength that will be needed to meet this and continuing eruptions on the thin surface of peace; that might be needed to meet a much greater emergency. Weapons, wealth, industrial potential, brains, inventiveness—oh yes, we have all these in good measure. But in a real test for survival, whether by nerves or bombs, what would count the most? The thing that counted in the Battle of Britain—the character of a people.

You think of some disquieting response to the present crisis: the childish reaction to seek somebody or something to blame (yes, you did it yourself!); of the chilling negative stance—the grim lipped headshaking; of the impulsive belligerent, schoolyard bully threats; of the shrugged shoulder escape into the trivial.

YET THAT is all probably human nature rather than American nature, you reflect. Nevertheless as the world sees us we have our human assets—initiative, courage, self-confidence, ingenuity; and our human weaknesses—softness, impatience, superficiality, for meeting crises. What we especially need is emotional maturity, and we are a comparatively young and undisciplined people to rise to this demand.

Yet, why are we not working on this as well as on bombs and airplanes? Why are we not trying to build some of the intangible fortresses we will require?

You wonder what could be done to encourage in adults—there is no time to wait on children—the fortitude and faith they are likely to need. For however the Korean incident may end, it points the way to increasing austerity, sacrifice, nerve testing, uncertainty of living for all Americans.

Perhaps a stockpile of human patience, calm nerves, self-control, unquenchable hope, can be built only by the individual contribution, each doing what he can about his own attitudes. Or perhaps more could be done if people talked this matter over more among themselves and communicated strength and maturity—yes, and security and friendliness to each other.

YOU THINK of another intangible needed for time of trial, the flame of conviction. With some people this is simply defense of their soil and possessions. With some it is an aggressive nationalism, with others an ideological fanaticism.

Americans have as much patriotism as any people, you tell yourself. But they will need more than this in the world struggle in which they are now involved. They will need a broader, more vitalizing sense of their part in advancing man's age-old struggle for personal freedom.

If indeed every nation thinks of itself as having a destiny, then Americans need a clearer concept of theirs. Not as chauvinists to subjugate or reform the other fellow. But rather to feel chosen to pass on a concept of a faith to which many peoples subscribe and toward which many more are groping.

You think of the history you and other Americans have studied in school. Perhaps a warmer, more vivid understanding of the American concept of freedom does have to be gotten across to students. But also every American now needs to see the present war of ideas in the light of its world significance and of its past history. They need to see themselves as part of the struggle against autocracy that begun surreptitiously centuries ago. They need to see themselves carrying the banner for free mankind through the ages and around the world.

That would help build their stockpile of confidence, faith, and steady nerves. For it would give them the needed sense of being protagonists for something bigger than themselves and their Nation, yes and older and more enduring. You wonder if this inner strength isn't what the Nation needs rather than a superficial "fighting ideology."

Pike's Confirmation

Good Americans must have read with amazement and indignation that Senator Hickenlooper is withholding confirmation of Sumner T. Pike's nomination to the Atomic Energy Commission.

If Mr. Pike found fault with the recent methods of investigation of the Joint Committee he is not alone in his criticism. Many more objective citizens feel the same way about the manner in which some members of Congress launch these matters. It is becoming a vicious habit that should be controlled. The distorted charges against Mr. Lilienthal and the other members of the commission fell pretty flat in the eyes of most fair minded observers. That Mr. Pike was loyal to his chairman should react in his favor. Mr. Lilienthal still has many admirers in the country who feel he was harried out of a career in which he had made a colossal contribution to the welfare of the American people.

To my mind, the greatest insult to Mr. Pike was the criticism that he did not instantly rubber stamp the idea of embarking on the questionable venture of H-bomb manufacture. He was reported as feeling that possibilities of peace should first be explored by the launching of "a bold dramatic program." This feeling was shared by many people less aware of its awful implications. Scientists and military men (Mr. Millikan and Admiral Nimitz, for example) publicly deplored the H-bomb program and are still allowed to serve in their respective fields. More practical minded Americans, no less intelligent, have asked the pertinent question of whether the immense sums necessary to carry on this uncertain venture might not better be expended in other defense projects.

"Copper Trouble"

I am an American mining engineer and dependent on production of copper within our domestic areas. Anent your June 22 editorial, "Copper Trouble," and Mr. Carlos Reyes' letter "Copper vs. Copper," will state that domestic importations from Chile's copper areas is not a new issue—criticism thereof runs back more than a century.

In the decade 1841-50, when the first domestic copper tariff was laid, United States produced 2688 and Chile 98,672 short tons of copper—a ratio of 1 to 36. By 1900 the United States production equalled 303,000 to Chile's 29,000 short tone—a ratio of 10 to 1. In 1947 the domestic production was only twice the Chilian output; and in a relatively short time Chile's output will again exceed United States copper production. The United States lost control of world's copper production in 1924—26 years ago. Today our domestic output is only 35 percent of the world's output.

Explorations within 90 percent of our 217 domestic copper mining districts are at a standstill, and have been for 25 years, due to a domestic nonparity price for copper caused by excessive foreign importations from the South American and African copper areas.

If 90 percent of our domestic lead, zinc, coal and iron districts were shut down to please foreign producers, and 90 percent of our agricultural districts were to lie fallow to placate foreign nationals, you would realize this economic misery that has prevailed within 145 of our domestic copper districts the past 20 years.

Aerial, snorkel submarine and communistic cell attacks will unquestionably paralyze South American and African copper imports during any new conflict. We should begin now to reopen and develop the illimitable copper poundages within our home areas—for national defense—instead of "scramming" for copper from domestic power installations, church bells, monuments, pots, pans and kettles, a la Hitler, if war overwhelms us.

Snyder Execution

Walter Winchell's column of June 23 states "Judd Gray and Mrs. Ruth Snyder went to hell via the chair." It may interest you, if not Mr. Winchell, to recall that during her confinement prior to her execution, Mrs. Snyder became a convert to the Catholic faith. Her last words before the current snuffed out her life were:

"Father forgive me for I have sinned,
Father forgive them, for they know not what they do
Jesus have mercy on me."

That is a perfect act of contrition, and Mrs. Snyder, having erred and been able to contritely plead for forgiveness, had every reason to expect the benevolent mercy of Almighty God.

Poor Rail Service

In the light of the prices some railroads charge passengers these days I wonder how they still attract customers.

For instance, last Monday I took a sleeper from Washington to Boston. I had to take a roomette because the train had only one standard berth car which was sold out.

The trip cost me $24.50 for transportation plus $8.22 for roomette, or $32.72. Later in the week I returned by plane. The price of the flight was $22.71—$10 less than on the train—and I slept at home.

My taxi fare to and from the airports was perhaps about $1.50 greater than the taxi fare to and from the train would have been, but this was to a considerable extent offset by lower tipping cost.

Lack of modern equipment on some trains accentuates the passenger's irritation from high fares. For instance recently in a Pullman car on an overnight train from New York to Washington the only ventilation in the lower berth was by an electric-fan contraption in the curtain. Its stream of air was so feeble that the berth was much warmer and closer than the aisle —particularly while the train was in the New York station.

What are travelers going to do about such a situation? My guess —and I have no interest in any air line—is that some smart travelers will take more and more to flying.

France As A Partner

The announcement of the Schuman plan, quite aside from its other implications, is a major landmark in France's climb back to the position of a great power. It also presents a happy opportunity to put a new and healthier base under Franco-American relations. For the Schuman plan is remarkable evidence that the period of French demoralization and dependency is coming to an end, and that traditional French leadership is coming to the fore.

Such a change in attitude is overdue anyway. The failure of our "public relations" with the French is an open secret. Americans are not loved in France, despite the fact that in six years, American soldiers have liberated French soil, United States emergency funds have fed and clothed Frenchmen when they were in desperate want, and the ERP has gotten France well along the road to economic recovery. Though it is possible to indict the French as being ungrateful and near-sighted, it is much more pertinent to review how we Americans have allowed such a situation to develop.

Going back several years, there is no doubt that United States troops were somewhat less than ideal ambassadors during the war. American officers all too often treated French officers and officials with ill-disguised annoyance and even contempt. All these things left their mark.

Since the war many Frenchmen have tended to look with critical eyes at even the most generous American actions. The Marshall Plan itself has been interpreted by some Frenchmen as a device to allow U. S. businessmen get a stranglehold on French markets. And lately we have seen a new and vocal brand of anti-Americanism led by Francois Mauriac, coupled with a growing campaign (led by the conservative Le Monde) to dissociate France from any military alliance with the United States.

Much of this unfortunate trend can again be attributed to a failure of "public relations." Below the polite formality of the diplomatic level, the French have sensed only too clearly that Americans regard them as a second class country, a status which they are not happy to accept. We have done little to restrain our natural American tendency to be blunt, relatively oblivious of the sensitivities of others, and imbued with a righteous sense of our superiority in all things. The result has been a series of unnecessary irritations and contretemps, robbing Franco-American relations of the warmth and sincerity that they require in this critical period.

But now, fortunately, Monsieur Schuman's bold initiative presents an excellent opportunity of getting out of this vicious circle and starting afresh. The plan clearly leads from strength and confidence, and has the ingredients of vision and leadership. And it also dictates that the French should be dealt with in the future with increased respect and consideration — as partners rather than dependents. Such a change in the American attitude will in turn do much to eliminate the postwar chip on the French shoulder: one made of hypersensitivity compounded with jealousy, which has made many Frenchmen happy to find dubious motives behind United States actions.

Now is also the time for a more effective information program in France. Many Frenchmen have reached astounding conclusions about United States policy because they were grossly uninformed (or misinformed) about the United States and particularly about American motives. An adequate information program is essential to eliminate misunderstandings of this sort.

Given a new American attitude toward the French, coupled with a more vigorous information program, there is no reason why Franco-American relations cannot now be put on a basis of mutual respect and confidence. Few things are more important in solidifying the bonds of the Western world faced with growing Soviet threats.

Hume's Commentary

The San Carlo Opera Company gave some very fine performances at the Watergate, but it was not always easy to enjoy them with Mr. Paul Hume's excoriation of the plots and the talking and laughing of the teenagers who attended.

I may be wrong, but I believe Mr. Hume's method of creating interest in the opera has a tendency to belittle, and will surely not stimulate interest in those who might be converted to this particular art. Regardless of the results, Mr. Hume's funny remarks are in extremely bad taste.

Far East Decision

By Marquis Childs

Background Of The President's Order

PRESIDENT Truman's order sending American sea and air forces into action in Asia will go down in history as one of the most extraordinary steps ever taken by an American President. It can be comprehended only in the framework of a world divided into two power complexes with nothing, or almost nothing, standing between them.

Childs

There is the background as yet untold of what led up to that decision. It goes back in reality considerably before the attack by the North Koreans on the South Korean republic.

When Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson conferred with Gen. Douglas MacArthur in Tokyo last week, they heard some strong talk. MacArthur expressed the view that American policy up to this point in Asia had been a disaster. Moreover, he stressed the immediacy of the dangers facing the United States at a half dozen points in Asia.

On the basis of this talk, plus what they had already learned in the Philippines and Korea, Bradley and Johnson took some preliminary precautions. A detail of American bombers, including the newest and largest types, was ordered to the Far East immediately.

THIS WAS prior to the return of the JCS chairman and the Defense Secretary. They reached Washington in their own plane on Saturday at 11:45 a. m., less than 12 hours before the Korean attack began.

They brought with them a top secret document of the highest significance. It was a memorandum prepared by Gen. Douglas MacArthur for the President. MacArthur reported directly to the President what he had told Bradley and Johnson—that American policy had been a disaster and threatened a worse disaster.

But the dynamic general went even further. He told the President there was a clear and present danger of a new Communist outbreak at one of the Asiatic tension points. He did not, of course, spot it in Korea. Bradley and Johnson themselves had, however, been given a detailed picture of Communist strength and its potentialities in North Korea.

Bradley and Johnson had returned convinced that a new activist policy was essential unless the United States was prepared to see all of Asia go Communist. Such a decision had been taken by a unanimous vote of the Joint Chiefs of Staff as long ago as last January. The decision taken by the JCS at that time involved three danger points:

1. Formosa and the need to deploy units of the American fleet in order to prevent capture of that island by Communist China.

2. The Philippines where the JCS were convinced of the urgent necessity for increasing American strength in the bases granted the United States under treaty rights with the Philippine government.

3. Military aid to Indo-China where the hardpressed French were threatened by the rebels under Communist-trained Ho Chi-minh.

The activist policy advocated by the JCS was overruled in the National Security Council. Secretary of State Dean Acheson believed the time had not yet come for such all-out measures. And he was supported in the showdown by the President.

Both Bradley and Johnson, but particularly Bradley, never ceased to urge the need for the steps agreed to by the three services. In the five months that have intervened scarcely a week has gone by that the patient general has not firmly but politely, in accord with his view of the subordinate role the military man must always take, pressed the JCS recommendations.

WHEN THE Korean attack broke, Bradley and Johnson both pleaded for immediate and all-out action in accord with the Joint Chiefs' plan. They argued that Korea was merely one—and a minor—testing point. Success there, they told the President, would embolden the Russians to move into every area where a partial vacuum of power existed.

Reinforcing their argument was the MacArthur memorandum. MacArthur had hinted to his visitors that if some action did not result, he might feel compelled to return to America and give the public the facts as he saw them.

In this setting the specific decision on helping the South Koreans seemed of almost minor importance. So much more was at stake as the President prepared to take the fateful decision. The Korean decision was never complicated by any consideration that American troops might be sent in since U. S. troop strength in the Far East simply would not permit such a move.

Finally—and perhaps inevitably—the President came down on the side of action. The order to MacArthur on the use of American planes went out 10 hours in advance of the President's announcement.

So the die was cast. Those who urged far-reaching action did so realizing full well that it could mean war. But they were convinced that piecemeal appeasement in the Pacific would certainly bring conflict and on the most disadvantageous terms for this country.

House Tax Bill Debate May Be Academic

By The Associated Press

The House began debating the $1,010,000,000 excise tax reduction bill yesterday, but the newly ordered United States military moves in the Far East raised some doubt whether there will be any tax cut at all.

One influential Democrat told reporters: "If this means war, we will have a tax increase in 30 days—not a decrease."

A Republican member of the tax-framing House Ways and Means Committee, Representative Kean of New Jersey, said that "developments in the Far East may make it completely unrealistic to reduce any taxes."

Representative Simpson, (Pa.), another Ways and Means Republican, said "this bill may be followed by a tax-raising bill, if the smoke in the Korean war bursts into flame."

Debate on the bill opened with Representative Doughton (D., N. C.) Ways and Means chairman, telling the House it had better accept an increase in corporation taxes to avoid a veto of the proposed excise cuts.

Republicans assailed the bill as a "hoax" and a "phony." Representative Reed (R., N. Y.) shouted: "This is the most dangerous and dishonest tax bill ever to be reported by a responsible congressional committee." He said it creates "an extremely dangerous psychology that may throw this Nation into a serious recession or economic depression."

The start of the debate was delayed as House members voiced their views on the United States military move to stop Communist aggression in the Far East.

But the bill cleared its first hurdle without a fight, as the House approved a "this-or-nothing" rule barring any member from offering an amendment. However, the procedure permits Republicans one opportunity to call for a vote on their tax views.

They moved in with a drive to cut the bill in half, with separate votes on one bill calling for a billion-dollar reduction in excise taxes on jewelry, furs, movie tickets, cosmetics and scores of other items; and the second, raising corporation taxes and plugging tax law loopholes.

Final vote on the bill is expected Thursday.

Alex Campbell Wins Indiana Nomination

Indianapolis, June 27 (U.P.).—Alex Campbell, former Assistant United States Attorney General who helped build the Government's case against Judith Coplon and Harry Bridges, was nominated by Indiana Democrats today for a seat in the United States Senate.

At the Democratic State Convention he won a three-way contest for the right to battle next November for the seat now occupied by Senator Homer E. Capehart, a Republican. Capehart is expected to be renominated in the GOP convention Friday.

Campbell, who headed the criminal division of the United States Attorney General's office from 1948 until he resigned to campaign for the nomination, piled up more than twice as many first-ballot votes as his competitors—Representative Andrew Jacobs, Indianapolis, and Prof. Charles C. Price, head of the University of Notre Dame chemistry department.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

The Great Decision

THE SIMPLEST and best explanation of our momentous Korean decision was given by one of the men who took part in the long, anxious meeting at Blair House. "This attack on South Korea," he said, "is an event like Hitler's re-occupation of the Rhineland."

Now, as then, has come a moment in history on which the whole world will look back, and say, "At that instant, in those hours, in that single decision, was when they made their fatal mistake." In the earlier case, if France had heeded the stern council of Georges Mandel, we now know that the instant mobilization of the French army would have caused Adolf Hitler to be deposed. Instead, the feeble French administration preferred the timid course, and the mistake was theirs.

On Saturday evening, when the news of the Communist invasion of South Korea first reached Washington, President Truman and his advisors were brusquely confronted with a similar choice. But the bold course has now been chosen by them, with remarkable speed and courage. Therefore one can predict, with perfect confidence, that history will hold it was the masters of the Kremlin who were tragically mistaken, in ordering this act of unprovoked aggression.

IT HAS been a bad time, this time of decision in Washington, when it seemed for a while as though we might choose differently. What would have happened if the President had made the other choice is comparable to what did happen after France and Britain let the Rhineland go.

In the Far East, to begin at the beginning, bandwagon psychology is very nearly the strongest factor in politics. Our choice was watched and waited for by every Orient leader, of every political color, in every country. If we had appeased, all the leaders of Asia from Quirino in the Philippines to the members of the government in Burma, would have begun their preparations for surrender.

Asia would have been transformed into a rancid mush, waiting to be spooned up by the Kremlin.

Western Europe, meanwhile, would not have been far behind. As has been repeatedly emphasized in this space, there is one great danger in Europe. This is the danger that the undefended Europeans will be driven to a mood of appeasement and surrender, by dramatic demonstrations of Soviet strength and Western weakness. Precisely such a demonstration was planned in Korea by the Kremlin.

Finally, if the Kremlin's Korean challenge had not been met by us, it would soon have been followed by other challenges, still more grave and menacing, in other vulnerable areas of the world. With our potential allies trembling and holding back, with our own will to act paralyzed by past folly, we would never have parried these new thrusts, in Berlin and Yugoslavia. In Iran and Indo, China. At the last, with loud, self-pitying whimpers, the whole Western world would have collapsed into ruin and destruction. Or, as happened in the process that began with the Rhineland reoccupation, the piecemeal surrenders would have led, at the last, to a world war.

THIS WAS the prospect that opened out before the President and the men around him on Sunday afternoon. These were the consequences of inaction, against which the political experts of the State Department and the strategic planners of the Pentagon frankly warned Harry S. Truman.

There was no folly or self-delusion this time, as there was when the Soviet atomic bomb exploded. But although the President was well and faithfully advised, no one can fail to admire the blend of plain guts and homely common sense that has marked his own handling of this immense crisis. This, indeed, was one of the occasions when Truman has seemed to sum up the good things in America.

It must be added, for the sake of the record, that this crisis would never have arisen at all if it had not been the sharp change of American policy that was initiated by the President in November, 1948; that was carried immeasurably further by Secretary of Defense Louis E. Johnson; and that was almost unanimously approved by the leading Republicans. American re-armament, so well begun by the late James V. Forrestal, was idiotically transformed into American disarmament. The faking and the untruths that were intended to conceal this fact no doubt deceived some of our people, but they did not deceive the Kremlin. For this reason, and for this reason only, the Kremlin was emboldened to attack.

Now however, all that is past. Now, we know where we stand. Now, the President's decision on the great and urgent issue of the Far East must surely presage another and almost greater decision, to do what is necessary to rebuild the defenses of the West at all points where they are weak. It is a grim and terrible thing to say, but we may some day be grateful to the masters of the Kremlin, for this Korean mistake of theirs which has ended our self-daubts and galvanized us into action.

Rumely Again Refuses Data To Congress on Subscribers

By the United Press

Edward A. Rumely, executive secretary of the Committee for Constitutional Government, yesterday refused to give Congress the names of persons who buy his organization's books and pamphlets.

He was cited for contempt of Congress once for a similar refusal and was acquitted.

He told the House Lobby Investigation Committee he is prepared to stand trial again rather than submit his subscription list. He said forced publication would violate the constitutional guarantee of freedom of the press.

Chairman Frank Buchanan (D., Pa.) said the committee "has not yet discussed in executive session the matter of citing Mr. Rumely for contempt."

The committee has demanded the subscription list as part of its investigation of the financing of lobby groups.

Benedict F. Fitzgerald, counsel for the congressional committee, accused Rumely's group of violating Federal laws by failing to report loans from New York Publisher Frank Gannett and Industrialist Irenee duPont.

Fitzgerald said Rumely's group has received loans of "over $1000 from Frank Gannet, Sumner Gerard, Irene duPont and others." He said they were not reported although the Lobby Act "states that loans are contributions which must be reported."

He said all contributions of more than $490 listed as "sales" of books and pamphlets to avoid the law's requirement of a report on every donation of $500 or more.

Butterworth Confirmed As Envoy to Sweden

The Senate yesterday confirmed President Truman's appointment of W. Walton Butterworth of Louisiana as Ambassador to Sweden.

Butterworth, who had been the target of Senate criticism when he headed the State Department's Far Eastern Division, won unanimous approval for his new post.

House Votes to Extend Draft

the compromise at 2 p. m. today.

Passage by a wide margin seemed assured.

The compromise does not give Mr. Truman the three-year extension of the existing law he sought. But it removes restrictions on his power to induct men, which both Houses voted.

In addition it arms him with authority he did not have previously to mobilize the reserves and National Guard. Defense sources said Congressmen added this on their own without any request from the Administration.

Pentagon officials said the compromise bill limits the power of the President to expand the armed forces by either draft or calling up reserves to a total of 2,005,000 men. This is the present top authorized strength, divided as follows: 837,000 Army officers and men; 501,000 Air Force; 662,882 Navy and Marine Corps.

Present strength is 1,458,000—592,000 in the Army, 410,000 in the Air Force, and 453,000 in the naval service. The Navy and Air Force are slightly below their current appropriated for strengths, while the Army is 38,000 men short, owing to a slowdown in recruiting in recent months.

Voting against the bill in the House were Representatives Fred L. Crawford, (R., Mich.), Robert Crosser (D., Ohio), Michael A. Feighan (D., Ohio) and Vito Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.).

In place of previous House and Senate versions, which would have put limits on Mr. Truman's power to induct men, the conferees substituted a one-year extension of the existing law permitting inductions whenever the services need men.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), of the House Armed Services Committee, at first planned to call up the compromise Thursday. But he later got permission from House leaders to interrupt debate on the new tax bill and bring up the draft immediately.

"These are critical and momentous times," he told the House. "No one can tell what tomorrow will bring forth. In this atmosphere the only sincible thing to do is extend the present draft law for one year."

Representative Vito Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.), long-time foe of the draft, could have forced a delay until today but agreed not to object on condition that a roll call vote be taken.

The compromise extends the draft until July 9, 1951. The old law technically expired last week but both houses voted a 15-day extension until July 9 while they struggled over a compromise.

The new bill erases all restrictions recently voted by the House and Senate on Mr. Truman's authority to set the draft machinery in motion.

Retained was a provision that, in effect, bars inductions when the armed forces have a combined strength of 2,005,882 men. As of April 30, however, that figure stood at only 1,458,000, insluding Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines.

Some of the conferees disclosed privately that their action was a direct result of the Korean crisis, even though they don't expect the law to be used. They said Russia might have interpreted any other action as a sign of American weakness.

The conferees emphasized that while the bill was not a mandate to mobilize the reserves, "it is a grant of authority to the President should conditions so warrant . . ."

The President had requested a flat three-year extension of the act as a "club in the closet" in case the cold war turned hot.

Trucking Firm Acquitted of Tariff Violation Charges

The National Trucking & Storage Co., 1435 New York ave. ne., was acquitted in Municipal Court yesterday of 44 counts of violating Interstate Commerce Commission tariff schedules.

The trucking concern was charged with giving preferential rates to the Adam Scheidt Brewing Co., Allentown, Pa., manufacturers of Valley Forge Beer.

The Government claimed that during two months of 1948 the company charged the brewers 23 cents per hundred pounds instead of the 27-cent rate on file with ICC.

T. Edward O'Connell represented the company and its president, David A. Hildebrand. O'Connell said it was the third time in nine years that the company had been acquitted of similar charges.

The President's Calling List

11:30—Representatives Rayburn, McCormack, Senator Lucas and members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Noon—Secretary of State Acheson.

12:30 p. m.—Secretary of Defense Johnson.

1 p. m.—Lunch.

2:45 p. m. — President leaves Blair House for courthouse cornerstone laying.

3:30 p. m. — Budget Director Lawton.

4:30 — Veterans Administrator Gray.

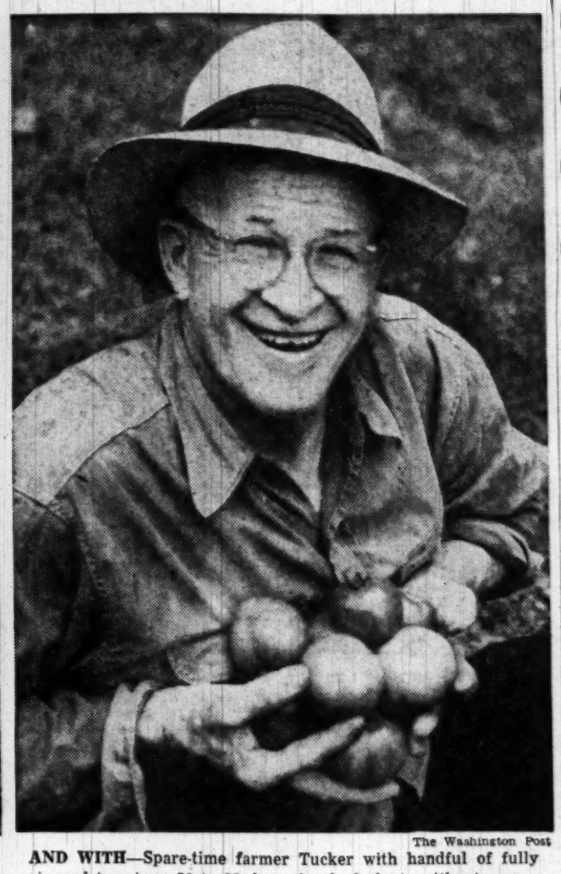
Tomatoes Before Their Time—Thanks to Secret Elixir

WITHOUT—Hubert Tucker measures tomato plant grown without benefit of his secret formula. Plants have only puny tomatoes



The Washington Post

AND WITH—Spare-time farmer Tucker with handful of fully ripened tomatoes, 20 to 25 days ahead of plants without sprays

Neighbors of Hubert Q. Tucker of 2725 23d rd. N., Arlington, are enviously and hungrily looking at his early-bearing plants, which produced ripe tomatoes last week.

It's a secret formula he is experimenting with, Tucker tells his neighbors when they ask him how he does it.

Using two different sprays—the ingredients are a secret—and a rye grass mulch, Tucker has been able to pick ripe fruit from Rutger tomato plants 20 to 25 days earlier than he can without the secret treatment.

He's done it two years in a row, he said yesterday. Last year it worked well on more than 50 percent of the plants he treated. This year it's better than 85 percent successful. He wants to improve his formula further before he lets the world in on it.

The most unusual effect of the Tucker plant elixir is that many of the plants are not more than a foot high when they bear. Tucker said a University of Maryland agricultural expert saw one of these half-grown wonders which last year bore on June 19, and told him it would remain stunted.

Instead, it grew to be at least five feet high and produced 86 tomatoes, bearing right up to the first frost, Tucker declared.

The Tucker-treated plants are strictly outdoor-grown. One spray is used just after planting, the other when they begin to bud. There are other parts to the secret process, too.

Tucker admits he's been getting a little help in his experiments from his son, a Maryland University graduate now studying for his doctor's degree in animal husbandry at Michigan State.

Rushing tomatoes is strictly a hobby with Tucker, a carpenter employed by the Smithsonian Institution. He also tries to beat all his neighbors with the first string beans, new potatoes and beets, merely by planting them early.

In the winter, he says, his hobby is coon hunting.

Tucker lived on a Virginia farm till he was 18, then lived an urban existence in the District for "too many" years. He moved to Arlington six years ago and got back to the soil.

Attlee Stand on Pool Backed in Commons

Checks Provided

French Give Details of Pooling Plan

Paris, June 27 (AP).—France published details of its coal and steel pool scheme today, providing for a virtual international government that would be subject to an annual vote of confidence.

The government would be made up of parliamentary representatives of the six participating states —France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg. It would control the production and marketing of coal and steel through a high authority.

Jean Monnet, behind-the-scenes author of the plan, pleaded for support of the French proposal as a means of wiping out selfish national interests in Europe.

Monnet said the plan also aimed at getting the participating countries to pool a portion of their sovereignty in a new international organization working for full employment "at a higher standard of living for the working man."

A working draft of the French proposal called for a new international government to be made responsible to the citizens of the member countries through the institution of a "common assembly."

London, June 27 (AP).—Prime Minister Attlee won a double-barrelled vote of confidence today on his abstention from the Shuman parleys.

By a vote of 309 to 289, the Laborites in Commons amended a joint Conservative-Liberal motion calling on the government to join the Paris talks on the French scheme to merge the coal and steel industries of western Europe.

The amended motion approving the government's policy was then adopted by a vote of 309 to 296.

Some Rightists Aid

Some Conservatives and Liberals apparently deserted their leaders. Labor's normal majority is only eight.

The vote came after two days of debate in which Winston Churchill accused the government and Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin of having aroused French suspicions that they are enemies of European unity.

"If the French needed proof that the British Socialist Party and government are hostile to the idea of a united Europe they could not find more conclusive evidence than the extraordinary pamphlet issued by the national executive of the Labor Party and timed in such a curious manner that I can only call it the soiled fingers of coincidence," said Churchill.

"One wonders if this trouble would have arisen among friendly governments if there had been a Foreign Secretary fit for his work or a Prime Minister able, amid graver preoccupations, to keep a grip on what was going on."

Pamphlets' Attack

The Labor Party pamphlet attacked the idea of a supranational authority to manage the proposed steel-coal pool. Critics said it opposed European cooperation except among Socialist governments.

Closing the debate, Attlee declared the British government "have always been willing, and are now, to enter into international arrangements" to promote peace and economic progress.

But, he declared, "we are not prepared to accept the principle that the most vital economic forces of this country should be handed over to an authority which is utterly undemocratic and is responsible to nobody."

These words on the proposed high authority to run coal and steel were the harshest yet used by a government leader.

Attlee said Britain did not attend the Paris parley because she was asked to bind herself beforehand to accepting the principle of such authority.

Churchill's Stand

Churchill urged the government to join the talks on the plan proposed May 9 by French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman.

"If we attend the conference, we can use all our influence and argument, and, if these are not accepted, we are not committed in any way," he said.

But he disclosed that he, too, was wary of a powerful supranational authority. He said:

"If I were asked if I would agree to a supranational authority with power to tell Great Britain not to cut any more coal or make any more steel, but to grow tomatoes, I would say without hesitation the answer is 'no.' But why not be there to give the answer?"

He added that he could not conceive of Britain being "an ordinary member of a federal union limited to Europe" but "we should help forward all movements for European unity."

'Metal' Hailstones Batter Vermont Town

Bennington, Vt., June 27 (U.P.) Hailstones, some the size of hen's eggs, battered this town today and the centers of some were found to contain mystifying bits of black or bluish metal.

Automobiles were dented, windows shattered and gardens wrecked.

Dozens of the bits of metal were found when the hail melted.

Auriol Fails To End 4-Day French Crisis

Paris, June 27 (U.P.)—President Vincent Auroil failed tonight to end France's four-day government crisis, despite urgent appeals for party leaders to forget their differences in the face of world tension.

But there were growing demands, strongly supported by Auriol, for an end to party bickering and formation of a national coalition (all parties except the Communists) to give France effective leadership.

The harassed President put off further attempts to end the deadlock until Wednesday, after the Socialists continued to hold out against participation in another middle-of-the-road coalition except on their own conditions—which the other parties were unwilling to accept.

Outstanding developments earlier today:

1. Former Premier Henri Queuille reported he could not solve the crisis.
2. Rene Pleven, defense minister in the last government, refused even to try.
3. The Radical Socialist called on all non-Communist parties to form a national coalition government "in view of the gravity of the international situation."

The Socialists, who would not cooperate with Queuille, immediately indorsed the idea of a government of national union, if one could be formed.

President Auriol was expected to ask Edouard Herriot, 78-year-old president of the National Assembly, to head the national government.

Service Reported Cleared by Board

In Crime Probe

6 Treasury Officials To Testify

The Senate Crime Investigating Committee meets this morning to hear a group of Treasury officials. The public hearing is scheduled for 10 a. m. in the Senate Office Building.

Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.), committee chairman, said all six witnesses will testify on the activities of criminal groups whose operations cross State lines.

Witnesses are Edward H. Foley, jr., Undersecretary of the Treasury; Commissioner of Narcotics H. J. Anslinger, Secret Service Chief U. E. Baughman, Treasury Enforcement Coordinator James J. Maloney, Assistant Customs Commissioner David B. Struginger, and Dwight Avis of the Alcohol Tax Unit.

Anslinger may testify on recent reports of a big dope-running ring operating in south Florida.

Career diplomat John S. Service was reported yesterday to have been cleared by the State Department Loyalty Board of pro-communism charges lodged against him by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.).

The board arrived at its decision after 15 days of investigation into the background and activities of the 41-year-old official. Service has been under congressional fire for his role in the 1945 Amerasia stolen secrets case.

While the final report has not yet been forwarded to Secretary of State Dean Acheson, it is understood it gave Service complete clearance. Barring some further development, the case now will go to President Truman's top Loyalty Review Board for audit.

Service was on his way to a new diplomatic assignment in India when he was recalled several weeks ago to undergo the loyalty check.

Meantime, members of the subcommittee said they still are in the dark as to how deeply Service was involved in the Amerasia case. It concerned 1700 military and diplomatic papers that were found in the New York office of Amerasia magazine.

McCarthy contends Service gave secret military information to Philip J. Jaffe, co-editor of the now-defunct publication, who was fined $2500 for possessing stolen documents. Service denies the charge.

The investigators on Monday read the transcript of a conversation between Service and Jaffe that was recorded by a hidden FBI microphone, but said it settled nothing. McCarthy had said it would prove his accusations against Service.

Lovesick Youth Jailed Pending Robbery Probe

Alexander V. Rom, the love-smitten, conscience-stricken bandit, pleaded guilty in District Court yesterday to charges of robbing a Western Auto Store clerk of a $3074 payroll last March.

The 20-year-old youth, of 3900 37th st., Brentwood, Md., surrendered at the Twelfth Precinct June 18, saying "I just can't hold it back; I just want to get it off my conscience." He told detectives he was in love and wanted to make himself "right" to be free to marry.

Rom was committed to jail pending a pre-sentence investigation by the probation office.

"I have no doubt there is a lot of good in this man," Judge Alexander Holtzoff told defense attorney James Hughes. "Even if he is put on probation, however, I think he ought to have a taste of jail."

Rom waived indictment and pleaded guilty.

plete confession to the double-murder, according to police, after he had voluntarily subjected himself to a lie-detector test.

Tyler repudiated this confession when he took the stand in his own defense during the eight-day trial and claimed he had been tortured into confessing.

During final arguments yesterday morning, Prosecutor Cecil Herlin told the jurors that Tyler's guilt was "clear and convincing."

"You heard policemen testify that this man re-enacted his crime," Herlin said, "how he hoisted himself on garbage tongs up to the second floor and let himself in the window."

"You heard from three sources that this man admitted both murders," the prosecutor continued in his one-hour summation. It was testified during the trial that Tyler had signed one confession, and confessed his guilt on two other occasions, before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence and to Jail Classification Officer Earle W. Gilkey.

Diminutive Defense Attorney James T. Wright argued that Tyler had taken a "cuffing around" from police before signing any statements. "Only God knows what happens to a man down at police headquarters," he said.

"And Tyler had an alibi," Wright stressed. "His mother and sister and father all testified that Tyler was at home in bed" when the crime was being committed, he said.

Judge Holtzoff took 35 minutes after lunch to instruct the jury. He told the jurors that to find Tyler guilty they must find that he entered the store with intent to rob, and murdered both men. The jury must determine how much credence to give the confession, he said.

Court officials said it was one of the shortest deliberations in memory of a first-degree murder trial.

Accepts Hospital Post

further extension at the option of city councils.

Cain said his "strong presentation" would not be another "filibuster," pointing out he would look "foolish" talking at great length on District rent control if matters concerning the Korean situation were before the Senate.

The length of his talk against granting the District one extra month's rent control would depend on the parliamentary situation when the bill comes up, Cain explained.

While the Senate conferees gave way on the extension formula, they did succeed in knocking out the House-approved "Westchester Apartments" amendment, thus giving protesting tenants new hope of preventing sale of their building on a cooperative purchase plan.

The existing law provides that at least 65 percent of tenants in a building must agreed to buy their apartments cooperatively before any deal can be made.

The House had voted to modify this requirement by limiting tenant protection to apartments renting for $85 or less. District rent officials contend 57 non-hotel units at the Westchester rent for less than $85 and 468 units for more than $85 a month.

Robert Cogswell, District rent administrator, had warned Congressmen the so-called Westchester amendment would open the door for cooperative sale of many other luxury apartments.

Only other provision at issue between the two houses was the so-called O'Hara amendment, which decontrols rent paid for a rooming house when its rooms are decontrolled. Senate conferees accepted this feature.

The new proviso decontrolling nonhousekeeping, furnished rooms, including those in hotels, was not at issue since both the Senate and House previously had accepted it.

Under the new bill, the District Rent Administrator also is directed to decontrol luxury apartments in transient hotels. These controls will be lifted Saturday.

The conferees were Senators Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), Edward L. Leahy (D., R. I.) and Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.), and Representatives John L. McMillan (D., S. C.), Thomas G. Abernethy (D., Miss.) and Joseph P. O'Hara (R., Minn.).

Prince Georges Changes Take Effect Saturday

The Prince Georges County Commissioners will meet in special session Saturday at 9 a. m. to put into effect governmental changes required under the Sothoron Act. The law, adopted by the Maryland Legislature last spring to "streamline" the county government, becomes effective Saturday. The meeting will be at the Marlboro Courthouse.

Vice-Gambling Probe Opened By Virginia Beach Grand Jury

Princess Anne Courthouse, Va., June 27 (AP).—A Princess Anne County special grand jury today was ordered by Judge Floyd E. Kellam to investigate reports of gambling, nude entertainment and illegal whisky sales at Virginia Beach and in the county.

The grand jury immediately began taking testimony from witnesses.

Kellam told the Circuit Court grand jurors there have been reports of "wide open gambling," slot machines operating freely and whisky being sold illegally in the county and the town.

"Do not hesitate to indict anyone" believed guilty of law violations, the jurist said.

Kellam was particularly emphatic in urging the stamping out of slot machines. Operation of "one-armed bandits" is "almost robbery," he said.

He said there were also reports of "nude entertainers" in beach night clubs.

The jurist referred to anonymous letters alleging widespread violations. He asked the jurors to find out who wrote the letters and to call them to testify.

Kellam called attention to reports of law violations in a weekly newspaper and suggested the editors of the newspaper be called to testify.

The jurist said he was disturbed by reports of a "bag man" who is supposed to collect money from gamblers. If this is true, he said, he would like the jurors to find out who this person is.

'BIGGEST' COURTHOUSE—President Truman guides into place the carved cornerstone of what will be the "biggest and finest" United States Courthouse in the Nation. Chief Justice Fred M. housed in the new structure.

'Threat of Tyranny'

Speaking of the Bill of Rights, the President declared:

"This concept of justice based on individual rights is so familiar to us that we take it for granted. Yet, in essence, it is a revolutionary concept. It has always been a threat to absolutism and tyranny. It was the great weapon in our own Revolution, and the basis of our Republic.

"Today, in a world where absolute power is again on the march, this concept of justice has tremendous strength. It is a challenge to the new forms of tyranny as it was to the old."

He pointed out that the American idea of law has been attacked widely in our time. He said:

"Fascism, naziism, Soviet communism, all have tried to convince people that our concern with individual human rights is false and fraudulent.

"Mockery of Justice"

They have subjected their own people to all the evils of tyranny—to kidnaping, torture, slavery, murder—without hope of redress or remedy. They have made a mockery of the forms of justice. Their judges are prosecutors; their prosecutors are hangmen; their defense attorneys are puppets. Their trials are coldly calculated displays of propaganda, based on torture and designed to spread falsehood."

Mr. Truman said that we are now participating in an international movement to better protect individual rights. With the first step the Charter of the United Nations, war crimes, crimes against peace and crimes against humanity have been outlawed.

He declared his hopes that the Senate will consent to ratification of the United Nations convention outlawing genocide. Also, he pointed to the Declaration of Human Rights as a furtherance of international law.

Comparison With Courts

"In its beginnings, this world movement toward the protection of human rights may not appear particularly impressive," the President said, "but the courts of the District of Columbia were not very impressive, either, when they were first set up 150 years ago.

"They were without buildings or physical equipment, and uncertain of their jurisdiction. These courts have grown strong because they are based on a living truth. And so it will be with the quest for the international protection of human rights. It, too, will succeed, because it is based on the same great concept.

"On us, as a Nation, rests the responsibility of taking a position of leadership in the struggle for human rights. We cannot turn aside from the task if we wish to remain true to the vision of our forefathers and the ideals that have made our history what it is."

Judge Stephens Presides

Chief Judge Harold M. Stephens, who presided, said: "It is fitting that District Court and the Appeals Court, whose jurisdiction in national and local matters combined transcends in extent and importance that of any of the other courts, either State or Federal, except the Supreme Court itself, should be housed in a manner suitable for both the efficiency and the importance of their function. They will be so housed in this new building, the cornerstone of which we lay today."

He added: "It is believed that the building will not only have a beauty and dignity appropriate to judicial use, but will also in room arrangement, furnishings, lighting and acoustics, function for the needs of judges, jurors, witnesses, lawyers, litigants and the public more efficiently than any other court building thus far constructed in the United States.

Historic Background

"The building site is not only accessible, and fitting in outlook, but is historically appropriate in that upon it was the home of Chief Justice John Marshall and near by the homes of Chief Justice Roger B. Taney and of Chief Justice Salmon B. Chase."

Judge Laws thanked all who aided in making the building possible and said the tribunal was pioneering the way for an emphasis on the convenience of the layman. He pointed out the features, such as lounges, message centers, suites of bedrooms for jurors, and soundproof rooms where laymen could work during delays in their cases.

Judge Law's description was so enthusiastic it caused President Truman to say he was almost convinced he would like to become a juror in the new building.

An Earlier Ceremony

Walter C. Clephane, a senior member of the District Bar Association, pointed out that the day was similar to that of August 22, 1820, when the cornerstone was laid for City Hall, which was later to become District Court.

There was a big celebration for the old building, important speakers, the Marine Band played and the day was also sweltering, Clephane said.

But the times were far different in other respects. The news of that day in the National Intelligencer was peaceful. It contained stories about mail contracts, a survey of the banks in the Bahamas, and an account of the tary of War John C. Calhoun. The tour of the Great Lakes by Secrepaper was curious about the tour, wondering whether it might disturb the Canadians, or whether it was merely for sightseeing.

W. Virginia Flood Toll Put at 33

West Union, W. Va., June 27 (AP). State police gave eight missing persons up for dead today, setting the total at 33 in the flash floods that swept down the mountain valleys of six north-central West Virginia counties Sunday morning.

Capt. E. E. Stout said 25 bodies have been recovered. The eight missing persons, he reported, are known to be dead.

A warm rain splattered the devastated area between Clarksburg and Parkersburg again last night, but it was nothing like the deluge that turned streams into raging torrents for a few hours Sunday.

Still to be recovered were the bodies of three members of the family of Mr. and Mrs. Clive Bailey of Smithburg. Also to be recovered were the bodies of four members of the B. J. Cooper family.

The eight persons missing and now known to be dead, Stout said, is the husband of Mrs. Katherine Simms, who was drowned along with her two children. The addition of Simms' name to the list brought the total dead to 33, as compared with Stout's previous estimate of 32.

Sen. Neely Still Thinks He'll See Wire-Tap Report

Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) said yesterday he thought he still had a chance of seeing a copy of the secret wire-tapping report of Police Lieut. Joseph Shimon.

The copy he has in mind, he said, is the one in the hands of Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett.

Ten days ago Neely asked Barrett for the report. Barrett referred the request to the Justice Department, which advised the Senator it could not direct Barrett to release the report since the FBI still was investigating.

Neely would not explain his renewed optimism over his quest for the report which is alleged to contain a statement by one of Shimon's subordinates that he arranged to tap Howard Hughes' wires during the Senate War Investigating Committee probe two years ago.

Pilot Blamed

DC-3 Crash Report Is Clarified

The Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday clarified an earlier report on the probable cause of the crash of a Capital Airlines DC-3 into the Potomac River on December 12, 1949.

The CAB said one or more engines were stalled and "the only explanation for a stall in this case is that sufficient air speed was not maintained." The Board found that the aircraft stalled at "an altitude too low to permit a recovery."

The pilot, Captain William J. Davis, was blamed for this by the board's finding. "It appears that Captain Davis did not give enough attention to all of the fight instruments, and, as a result, permitted the aircraft to stall," the CAB declared.

Captain Davis and five others were killed in the crash.

Judge Hastie Quizzed by Senate Group

Judge William H. Hastie yesterday was quizzed behind closed doors by the Senate Judiciary Committee on his association in left-wing organizations.

Hastie is serving as judge of the Third Circuit United States Appeals Court under a recess appointment by President Truman. The Judiciary Committee is considering whether to recommend Senate confirmation for Hastie to continue in office.

Judiciary Committee Chairman Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) said he knows Judge Hastie has participated in organizations identified as Communist front groups either by the House Un-American Activities Committee or the Justice Department.

McCarran said the issue is whether or not Hastie has evinced sympathy for communism by joining left-wing groups.

A similar question raised while Hastie's nomination to be governor of the Virgin Islands was before the Senate in 1946 brought a vigorous denial from Hastie and others.

'Voice' Is Beaming U. S. Statement Through Far East

The "Voice of America" yesterday began a 24-hour, round-the-clock broadcast to the Far East of President Truman's statement on Korea and East Asia.

The State Department's official radio repeated over and over the full text of the White House announcement in the Korean language, the Mandarin and Cantonese Chinese dialects and in English. It was read at slow dictation speed.

An announcement said this would be kept up until the next regularly scheduled programs for the Far East today.

U. S. Urged To Develope Newsprint

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The government yesterday was urged to open up Alaska's vast potential supply of newsprint in a move to help win the war of ideas over communism, and to help stop the trend of newspaper mergers in this country.

Newsprint is the scarcest commodity on this planet," Morris Ernst, New York attorney, told the 17th convention of the American Newspaper Guild, meeting at the Statler.

Ernst, who helped found the Guild in 1933, declared "there's a crying need for newsprint," both to save American newspapers from 'vanishing" in consolidations, and to keep alive the newspapers of the underground behind the Communists' iron-curtain.

An appeal for the United States to develop Alaskan newspaper sources was also made earlier by Sam Eubanks, executive vice president of the Guild. He blamed an international newsprint cartel with price-raising American newspapers out of business. Eubanks maintained that Alaskan newsprint supplies would be ample to keep 1450 small papers running annually.

Ernest declared that newsprint is "bullets" in the "war for the minds of people, and that in realizations of this, Russia is supplying newsprint free to its satellite countries.

The American publishers, however, Ernst said, have taken a "do-nothing" attitude on the high cost and scarcity of newsprint and the consequent dwindling of American dailies and weeklies. He urged the Guild, representing 25,000 newspaper employes, to "needle" the American Newspaper Publishers Association, and to seek joint action in attacking the newsprint shortage and other problems of newspaper economics.

Top leaders of the Guild, were confronted yesterday with a request from staff employes for a meeting to discuss collective bargaining.

Approximately 75 employes of the Guild at Headquarters in New York and elsewhere wrote to the international executive board demanding an audience to discuss "better collective bargaining relations."

Earlier in the day, the convention created a special committee to consider an executive committee proposal for Guild publication and sponsorship of daily newspapers to protect "the principles of a press independent of Government regulation."

The board's resolution said that the present trend toward the consolidation of newspapers, together with the "deterioration of the newspaper industry on the economic and editorial level" pose a serious threat to the freedom of the press. This threat, the resolution said, is "some form of public regulation."

The Guild "intends to acquire facilities" needed to publish newspapers, the resolution said, and "where advisable" work with other trade unions, and civic groups, in creating "newspapers dedicated to the public interest."

Great Northern R. R. Service Curtailed

Chicago, June 27 (U.P.).—A strike by 4000 switchmen tightened its grip on five Western and Midwestern railroads today while Federal mediators sought to prevent another walkout that could tie up the Nation's entire rail system.

The switchmen's strike, which began Sunday, forced the Great Northern today to cancel all service on 12 branch lines.

Great Northern spokesmen said pickets and the reluctance of nonstrikers to cross their lines made it difficult to maintain even limited service, although main-line passenger trains and some freights still were operating.

Supervisors Load Ore

Supervisory employes took over the job of loading ore boats at the Great Northern's huge docks at Superior, Wis., but the movement of iron ore from Minnesota's Mesabi range was running far behind schedule.

The Great Northern was the only one of the five roads attempting to operate. The Rock Island, Western Pacific, Chicago Great Western and Denver & Rio Grande Western shut down completely.

Chairman Francis O'Neill of the National Railway Mediation Board called representatives into conference after talking yesterday with representatives of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and Order of Railway Conductors.

The two unions, representing 250,000 rail workers, demand a 40-hour work week with no pay cut. The demand was the same that led to the switchmen's strike.

Under "cooling off" provisions of the National Railway Labor Act, conductors and trainmen will be free to strike after July 15.

O'Neill said he plans to confer also with M. G. Schoch, president of the AFL Railroad Yardmasters, who also threaten to strike after July 15 on the 40-hour-week issue.

In another dispute, 300 trainmen walked off the job in a working-rule dispute with the 43-mile Lake Terminal Road and threw 6000 employes of the National Tube Co. into idleness at Lorain, Ohio.

GE Offers Wage Hike And Pension Benefits

New York, June 27 (U.P.).—The General Electric Co. today offered its 100,000 production workers a 3 percent general wage increase, expanded insurance and pension benefits ranging up to $125 a month.

The offer was contained in a "master" contract that would run for five years with a yearly-wage-reopening clause.

It was made separately to the CIO International United Electrical workers, the independent United Electrical Workers Union and to other unions representing GE workers.

The two major unions have been without a contrast since April 1. As the result of a recent jurisdictional election, IUE represents 48 GE bargaining units and UE 40.

The CIO Union immediately denounced the proposal as inadequate but called it the first "serious contract proposal since June, 1948," and said it would resume negotiations with GE.

The independent Electrical Workers Union also denounced the proposal, saying it "gives with one hand and takes away all that is given and more with the other."

Under the proposed contract, GE said, the wage increase would not be "less than 4 cents an hour." Employes retiring in the next five years with 25 years or more of service would receive a total pension of more than $125 a month, including Social Security benefits.

GE said the insurance, lumped together in one package, provided life insurance amounting to a minimum of $2000, and an average of $4500 a worker.

Committee Vainly Tackles Lustron Riddle

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A Senate subcommittee tried in vain yesterday to clear up the mystery of how the tangled and peculiar financial dealings of the now-defunct Lustron Corporation so long escaped the notice of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Evidence before the committee headed by Senator J. William Fulbright (D., Ark.) showed that not only had RFC three liaison officers studying affairs of Lustron, but there were daily reports on the corporation and five separate and independent audits by various firms.

One audit, that by Booz, Allen and Hamilton, cost $60,000, and still failed to disclose what RFC and the committee have charged was a half-million-dollar fraud.

Evidence before the committee yesterday showed that Paul Buckley, one of the Lustron officials, not only owned 25 percent of the stock in the Commercial Home Equipment Corp. of Chicago, but also was the second largest stockholder in the Federal Machine & Welding Co., with which Lustron had a large contract.

Paul J. Cotter, chief of the RFC Investigation Division, has charged that Commercial Home Equipment Corp. fraudulently overcharged Lustron in the amount of half a million dollars.

Fulbright quoted corporation law to show that a director of a corporation could not enter into a contract that would interfere with his official duties.

Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.) exploded wrathfully during the hearings that it was obvious there had been "dirty work at the crossroads" and that someone was "criminally responsible" and should be prosecuted.

U. S. to Support Crop Prices at Higher Levels

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Prices of farm products will be supported at higher levels than last year, the Department of Agriculture announced yesterday.

Definite levels at which prices will be supported will be announced later.

The department announced, however, that if the support levels had been based on the May 15 parity, they would have been several cents higher in all the basic crops, wheat, cotton, corn, rice, peanuts and tobacco.

Each crop was covered by a separate announcement, as follows:

WHEAT: Will be supported at 90 percent of the parity price of July 1, which will be announced in a few days. If the support price had been fixed on the May parity the support rate would average $1.97 a bushel. The 1949 average was $1.95. The July rate is expected to be slightly above the May rate.

CORN: Will be supported at 90 percent of the parity price of October 1. If figured on the May 1 parity, the price support level would average $1.43 a bushel as compared with $1.40 last year. A temporary support level for corn grown in noncommercial areas has been set at $1.05.

TOBACCO: Rates for flue-cured will be announced in a few days. They will be 90 percent of July 1 parity. Burley will be supported at 90 percent of October 1 parity, fire-cured will be 75 percent of the burley level; and dark air-cured and Virginia sun-cured at two-thirds of the burley level. Maryland tobacco will be supported at 86 percent of the October 1 parity.

If the figures had been based on the May 15 parity—the last announced, the support price for Maryland tobacco would be 47.6 cents a pound, as compared with 41.8 for the crop now being sold. Virginia sun-cured would be 29.9 cents, compared with 26.9; burley 44.8, compared with 40.3 last year; and flue-cured 44.8, compared with 42.5 this year.

PEANUTS: Will be based on August 1 parity. If based on the most recent parity edible peanuts would be supported at $214 a ton for Spanish and Valencia east of the Mississippi, and $209 west, as compared with $209 and $204, respectively, last year. Others would be comparatively raised.

RICE: will be based on August 1 parity. Latest parity basis would increase the support rate from $178 last year to about $2.03.

COTTON: Will be based on August 1 parity. At present parity the support for middling 7/8 cotton would be about 29 cents as compared with 27.23 cents this year.

Savings-Loan Bill Is Signed By Truman

By S. Oliver Goodman

Legislation of importance to the Nation's giant savings and loan industry was signed yesterday by President Truman.

The new law directs the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp. to retire annually an amount of its capital stock equal to 50 percent of its net income for the year. The repayment of 100 million dollars of Treasury funds can be completed in about 12 years, it was estimated.

As a first step toward repayment, each member institution is required to buy stock in its respective district Federal Home Loan Bank equal to at least 2 percent of its outstanding home mortgage loans (instead of the previous minimum of 1 percent).

Also, the bill reduces the premium rate for Federal insurance from 1/8 of 1 percent to 1/12 of 1 percent of the insured accounts, retroactive to June 30, 1949. In addition, the signed legislation increases the maximum insurance coverage to $10,000 for each savings account, dependent on similar legislation being enacted for the banks.

Another amendment provides that savings and loan associations maintain a liquidity ratio of 4 to 8 percent.

The Treasury Department is authorized to backstop the Federal Home Loan Bank System, in case of extreme emergency, by purchasing the securities of the district banks up to a maximum of one billion dollars.

FORMAL OPENING: The regional Federal Home Loan Bank yesterday formally opened its new offices in Greensboro, N. C. It is the first of the 11 in the system to occupy made-to-order quarters. The bank, formerly located in Winston-Salem, has 442 member associations of which 22 are in the District of Columbia. Directors from Washington are Edward C. Baltz and Waverly Taylor. In its 17-year history, the regional FHLB has made more than 8800 loans to members for a total of 415 million dollars.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Harold J. Henry has been appointed vice president in charge of sales for Commercial Solvents Corp. Henry, formerly president and general manager of Tek Hughes, Inc., succeeds Henry W. Denny who retired . . . Washington Chapter, National Association of Cost Accountants, won a 2-foot loving cup in a two-city competition with Hampton Roads Chapter . . . Gordon A. Chambers has been named manager of the new Southern division of Eastman Kodak Co. . . . William F. C. Ewing is the new president of Alexander Smith & Sons Carpet Co. He is a great-grandson of the founder.

BAROMETER UP: Freight loadings in the seven Atlantic States and D. C. are expected to increase 6.2 percent in the third quarter over the same period last year. Sharpest upturn is predicted in loading of building materials. The forecast was issued yesterday by the Atlantic States Shippers Advisory Board. In addition to D. C., territory covered by the forecast includes most of New York, New Jersey, eastern half of Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia.

ODD LOTS: Southern Co. has filed plans with the SEC covering the proposed issue of an additional million shares of common stock to assist subsidiaries in financing construction . . . Emerson Radio & Phonograph Co. unveiled its 1951 line of television receivers in a price range of $149.95 to $339.50, an average of 50 percent under previous models . . . Chevrolet reported retail car and truck sales in first 20 days of June numbered 113,142, topping any comparable period in Chevrolet experience . . . Dun & Bradstreet reported business failures in week ended June 22 dropped 147, lowest weekly total this year.

DOUBLE SHIFT: The Norfolk assembly plant of the Ford Motor Co. will begin double shift operations July 17, plant manager G. L. Lemoine announced today. Present production rate of 327 units per day will be increased to 525 units per day—41 passenger cars and 94 trucks. From the Norfolk plant, vehicles go to dealers in sections og Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolna, Georgia, Florida, West Virgnia, Maryland and the District of Columbia.

STILL DROPPING: Capital Transit Co. yesterday reported net income of $67,047 for May, a drop of 48.7 percent from the $130,746 in the same 1949 month. Revenue passengers deceased 8.8 percent, operating revenues were down 4.5 percent while operating costs were off 2.1 percent. For the first five months, the transit system reported net income of $129,902 for a slump of 70.5 percent under the $440,527 in the corresponding period last year. Total passengers for the five-month period declined 10.6 percent to 118,944,506. The Public Utilities Commission is still weighing a fare increase plea of the company.

EARNINGS: Southern Railway Co. reported net income of $5,705,753 for first five months, against $3,371,152 in same 1949 period . . . Beatrice Foods Co. net for three months ended May 30 totaled $732,267 or 67 cents a share vs. $800,750 or 73 cents a share in like 1949 period . . . Ex-Cell-O Corp.'s net for six months ended May 31 totaled $1,716,271 or $2.69 a share vs. $1,856,428 or $2.91.

6 From Area Unhurt In Ship Collision

Six persons from the Washington area escaped injury yesterday when their cruise ship collided with a freighter in New York harbor 30 minutes after it started out for a Mediterranean trip.

The cruse ship, the American Export Line S. S. Excalibur, was then beached off Brooklyn and the passengers transferred to tugboats, disembarking at Jersey City. None of the 114 on board were injured.

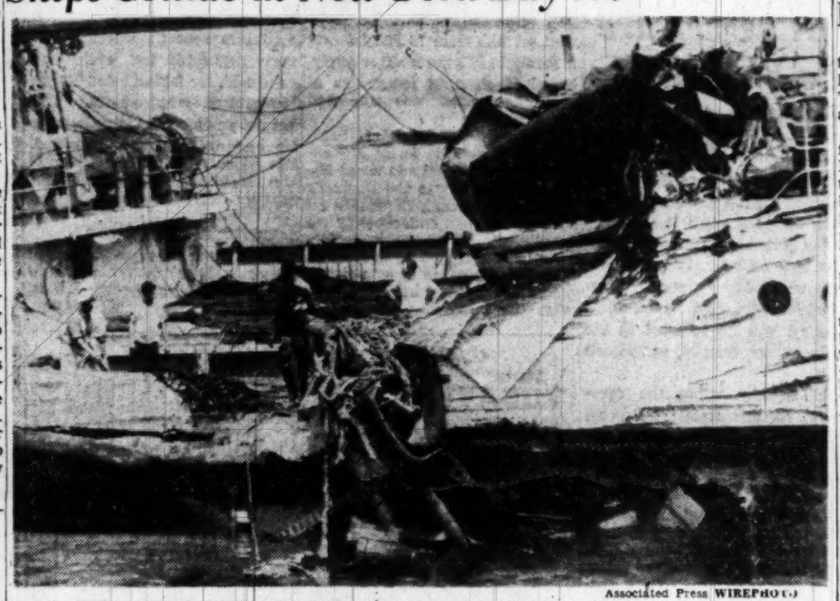
The Washington office of the line listed the local passengers as Judge Matthew F. McGuire of District Court and Mrs. McGuire, 2701 Connecticut ave. nw.; Eugene J. Butler, assistant director, legal department, National Catholic Welfare Conference, and Mrs. Butler, 8 East Melrose st., Chevy Chase, Md.; Dr. M. Virginia O'Neill, supervisor of student teaching, Wilson Teachers College, 3352 18th st. nw. and Miss Leah Kaplan, 1372 Fort Stephens dr. nw.

The Excalibur collided with the Danish freighter Colombia just north of the Narrows in upper New York Bay in a calm sea and clear weather. The cause of the crash was not determined.

The freighter, entering the harbor after a run from Philadelphia, caught fire. It was towed to a Brooklyn dock, with a city fireboat following, pumping water as the ship proceeded. City fire apparatus attacked the blaze at the pier and brought it under control.

The Excalibur was bound for Marseille, France, as the first stop on a 43-day cruise, carrying many on Holy Year visits to Rome.

Ships Collide in New York Bay . . .



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

DISASTER AVERTED—The bow (dark mass, upper right) of the Danish freighter Colombia rests on the deck of the cruise ship Excalibur after the two ships collided in upper New York Bay yesterday. The Excalibur is low in the water as a result of flooding through large hole (upper right) in hull. Short time later the ship was beached off Brooklyn. The Colombia caught fire but the flames were quickly extinguished. The Excalibur was bound for the Mediterranean with 114 passengers. No injuries were reported

1st Polio Reported In Alexandria

Alexandria's first polio case of the season was reported to the city health department yesterday, Dr. T. F. McGough, health officer, announced.

McGough said the illness of a five-year-old boy from the Beverley Hills section, who was admitted to Children's Hospital Sunday, has been diagnosed as polio. He said he was informed the boy had a mild paralytic case and was in "fairly good" condition.

Council Enacts New Fee System For Martinsburg

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 27 (AP).—The city's elaborate new system of municipal licenses and fees was enacted last night, but not until the city attorney and a policeman had gone out to round up a reluctant councilman for a quorum.

The new levies, ranging from $12 to almost $3000 a year, go into effect Saturday. They replace a gross sales tax which has been the subject of controversy for more than two years.

The fees apply to every type of business, retail, manufacturing and professional enterprises in the city.

Group to Probe Prisoner Deaths

Baltimore, June 27 (AP).—State Senate President Joseph R. Byrnes (D. Balto. 5th.) plans to appoint a Legislative Council committee to look into the several recent reports of prisoners dying in jail for lack of medical attention.

Byrnes, who is chairman of the Legislative Council, said he has been of the opinion for a long time that the "State should set up some type of institute where all arrivals at penal institutions who appear ill should receive immediate examination by a doctor."

Meanwhile, President C. Markland Kelly, of the Baltimore City Council, said he, too, will appoint a committee to study the same problem.

Canadian Women Pay $100,000 for Queen's Carpet

London, June 27 (AP).—Queen Mary's needlework carpet—a royal labor of love for dollar-short Britain—was sold today for $100,000 to a Canadian Women's Empire organization.

The purchaser was the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire of Canada, which proposes to exhibit it at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto in August and, after a Canadian tour, present it to the National Gallery.

Besides the purchase price, the organization will turn over to the British Treasury whatever additional dollars are realized from the tour.

The 83-year-old Queen Mother, who spent eight years completing the 12-panel, gros point carpet, received the news with a happy laugh.

One of the first things she wanted to know was exactly how much $100,000 is in pounds sterling.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, June 27 (AP).—Grains had a wild time today trying to keep up with news from Washington and finally settled for around yesterday's close. The exception was July soybeans, the wildest of all deliveries which signed off 5½ cents lower.

Korean news was the prime influence in the trading. At the start traders realized on yesterday's advance and prices broke rather sharply. However when it was announced that United States would give South Korea armed support prices bounded upward, only to encounter profit cashing at the finish.

Wheat closed unchanged to ⅝ higher; oats were unchanged to ½ lower; corn was ⅜ lower to ½ higher; rye was ¾ to 1¼ lower, soybeans were 5½ lower to ¾ higher and lard was 5 cents a hundredweight lower to 12 cents higher.

A New Marx 'Epic,' But Same Formula

By Richard L. Coe

FROM HINTS DROPPED on my head the last several centuries, I gauge there are no halfway opinions about the Marx Brothers. The boys are either in or they don't exist.

Keith's has come up with the first Marx epic in some years, Groucho, Harpo and Chico in "Love Happy." Cultists will rank this one above "Room Service" and "A Night in Casablanca," though well below "Animal Crackers," "The Cocoanuts" and "A Night at the Opera."

To a cultist, this will mean something, though to be sure the true Marxist wouldn't dream of missing anything the boys do, just as the non-Marxist wouldn't even consider seeing them.

This story was dreamed up by Harpo and gives him more to do than usual. It turns Groucho into Sam Grunion, private eye, nebulously involved in telling us how Madame Egilichi married eight husbands in an effort to locate the Romanoff diamonds. Of hodge-podge importance are hundreds of cans of sardines, a troupe of young players putting on a musical comedy and a chase across the roofs and signs of Times Square.

Also fitted into the well-established formula are spots for Chico's piano gagging, Harpo's string poetry, Marion Hutton's "Who Stole That Jam?" and specialized roles for Melville Cooper, Eric Blore and Dancer Paul Valentine.

There's also room for Vera-Ellen to dance and for Ilona Massey, as the villainess of the piece, to mock the alluring, passionate ladies of foreign origin.

Now the trouble at this late date with the Marx boys is that they do have a formula and that it shows. Gone is the careless, unexpected foolery of their early days; one expects certain things to happen. If they don't we're disappointed; when they do, we're not too surprised.

Fortunately, the things that do happen in "Love Happy" have their charm. There's a nice beginning with Groucho, though he does pop up pretty seldom later. There's a good scene with Harpo stealing groceries for the starving thespians. There's a charming scene for Harpo with Vera-Ellen, again concerning food.

But, on the whole, the formula is now a bit too pat for the unmitigated delights of yore. It's grand to have them back, especially not in the "Room Service" style. Marxists will enjoy themselves if they don't expect too much.

"LOVE HAPPY." United Artists release produced by Lestor Cowan. Screenplay by Frank Tashlin and Mac Benoff from a story by Harpo Marx. Music by Ann Ronell. Photographed by William C. Mellor. Directed by David Miller. At Keith's.

New Saucer Story: Flying Cigar Seen By 30 on Airliner

Los Angeles, June 27 (AP).—United Airlines today disclosed the latest flying saucer report:

First Officer David Stewart of Redondo Beach, Calif., today told a news conference that his crew of five and some 25 passengers watched a brilliantly-glowing object speed through the desert sky Saturday night.

Stewart said the object was more cigar-shaped than the previously reported pancake-shaped "saucers."

He said his ship was flying at 14,000 feet and that the object flew a parallel course for 20 miles and then faded into the distance.

'Scottsboro Boy' Patterson Seized By FBI Agents

Detroit, June 27 (U.P.).—The FBI today arrested Haywood Patterson, one of the "Scottsboro Boys" convicted in Alabama's famed Scottsboro rape trial.

Patterson, serving a 75-year-sentence for rape, escaped from the Montgomery, Ala., prison in July, 1948.

When arrested at the home of a sister today, he said he had been living comfortably on a $4700 advance given him by a New York publishing firm toward a book he had dictated. "The Scottsboro Boy." He said he had been in Detroit for three weeks, and that in addition to receiving money from the publisher, he was employed here as a construction worker.

At Watergate

1812 Overture To Be Aided By Cannon

Tchaikowsky's "Overture, 1812" will have all the realism the composer intended when it is played by the National Symphony at the Watergate on next Wednesday.

Genuine Army cannon, borrowed from the Fort Myer's Third Infantry, will be sounded at the finale of the Russian composer's work.

Tchaikowsky wrote the overture to commemorate the Russian victory following Napoleon's retreat from Moscow in 1812. He included a volley of cannon in the score.

When it was played for the first time, the story goes, cannon lined the street of the Russian capital and a few fired the required volley at the conductor's cue. Only difficulty was that long after the orchestra was finished the cannon continued their performance.

Mitchell's cannon will be placed along the banks of the Potomac and will be electrically detonated. Originally the National Symphony conductor asked the Army to provide cannon on a barge behind the orchestra, but he was willing to revise the plan when the Army informed him that the volley might sink the cannon barge and the barge on which the entire orchestra was sitting.

The performance of the Tschaikowsky overture is part of a program in tribute to Washington's Susquicentennial celebration.

More Farms Ask D. C. Permits

The Health Department received yesterday applications for District permits from 76 dairy farms, bringing to 278 the number applying since chemical sterlization of farm equipment was approved last week.

Health Officers Daniel L. Seckinger said if these farms are approved, they should add about 50,000 gallons a day to the District's milk intake, enough to "insure an adequate supply under nearly all condition." Three inspectors have been assigned to inspect as many of these farms as possible before the ban on imported milk takes effect July 1.

While these farms rushed to obtain applications, permits of 10 producers near Cumberland, Md., were suspended last week, Burdette said, for falling below Health Department requirements. This was not an unusually large number for one area, it was explained. The farmers will have a chance to win back their permits at the next quarterly inspection.

Vernon's 3-Run Homer in 12th Tops Yanks, 4 to 3

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

NEW YORK, JUNE 27.—There is no cry now to break up the Yankees, one-time oppressors of the other American League clubs. The evidence is that the Yanks are disintegrating. Right now they're in second place, steeped in high doubt that they'll ever catch the Tigers, and they could finish as low as fourth.

At first base, at third base, in the outfield and the bullpen Casey Stengel is having his troubles. They stem directly from the trouble of Tommy Henrich, Bobby Brown, Joe DiMaggio and Joe Page.

POVICH

Page, whose relief pitching was terrorizing the league last season, has been having a horrible time of it. He's not cowing anybody, the other clubs have been teeing off on him, and are now happy to see him walk into a ball game.

All that Page has been taking to the mound with him this year is his swagger. Those who set store by their faith in cycles say they called it—that Page is no-account in alternate years. He pitched Bucky Harris' '47 Yankees to the pennant and cost 'em the flag in '48. He bounced back to be the biggest single factor of the 1949 victory, and is letting the Yanks down this year.

BUT THE BIGGEST blow to the Yankees is not Page's slump. It is Tommy Henrich's collapsible knee that is keeping him out of too many ball games. When Henrich has been able to play, the Yankees were able to rise above their other problems. In the 21 games in which Henrich has performed, the Yankees won 15, which ought to be significant.

Stengel's sufferings at third base are directly traceable to the hitting slumps of Bill Johnson and Bobby Brown. Brown, a defensive risk, was supposed to offset his lack of skill in the field with his hitting. He has been hitting exactly .205 for the Yanks. Johnson has been no help, either, with his .235 average. Stengel is on the point of desperation.

Any day now, you're apt to see Billy Martin, recalled from Kansas City, playing third base for the Yanks despite the fact he is a second baseman by trade. Stengel is also tugging and hauling with the idea that he can move Gerry Coleman to third, play Martin at second as an alternative. But he's reluctant to disturb the Rizzuto-Coleman double play combination.

JOE DIMAGGIO'S .261 average isn't helping any. He's still a dangerous clutch hitter but he isn't getting on base with the same frequency and pitchers are getting him out on the same ball he used to murder—the hard one down the middle.

Stengel is ready to junk the two-platoon system that won the pennant for the Yankees last year. He was saying today that Hank Bauer, previously used only against left-handed pitching and alternated with Cliff Mapes, is now in his outfield to stay.

Bauer has amassed a smart .335 average, but it is somewhat specious inasmuch as he has been hitting mostly against left-handed pitching. Nobody expects him to maintain that figure when right-handers begin working on him.

Jackie Jensen, too, is figuring in Stengel's new plans. He's the Yankees' bonus baby, who has been fettered to the bench except for pinch-hitting appearances. Stengel likes his speed and power and is ready to risk his greeness in an effort to stimulate the Yankees' outfield performance.

THE YANKEES situation has all the evidence of panic. They can miss out on more profits than any club in the league if their team is not a pennant factor. They admittedly took the worse of their recent deal with the Browns to add a pair of undistinguished relief pitchers, Joe Ostrowski and Tom Ferrick. The Browns had 'em over a barrell and got four pretty fair ball players. Plus $50,000, in the exchange.

The significant item was that the Yankees had nothing in their extensive farm system when they needed a guy to take up the slack caused by Page's slump. The days of push-button Yankee managers who needed only to call up the stars of Newark and Kansas City when they needed help, are no more.

When Stengel sought to improve his first base situation, caused by Henrich's defection and Jack Collins failure to hit, he could turn only to Johnny Mize at Kansas City. Big Jawn demonstrated quickly that he still can't throw with a sick shoulder. The Yankees have been somewhat amazing by staying close to the pace, with all their problems. But the temptation is to write 'em off as a pennant winner.

Harper Wins, 4 and 3, for PGA Title

By Fritz Howell

Columbus, Ohio, June 27 (AP).—Balding, 36-year-old Chandler Harper of Portsmouth, Va., climbed on the throne as PGA champion today, firmly clutching a 10-year-old wooden-shafted blade putter—the magic wand with which he won the right to rule.

The drawling fee course professional defeated Henry Williams, jr., 33-year-old pro at a church-owned Secane, Pa., course, 4 and 3, in today's loosely-played 36-hole final of the $40,000 mid-century classic over Scioto Country Club's treacherous 7032-yard terrain.

In 12 years of touring the tournament trail Harper won only one tournament up to today—the 1950 Tucson Open. His victory here came as a surprise to everyone but Chandler Harper.

"After I got by Dick Metz in the second round, I felt that I could win," the Virginian said. "I still had Lloyd Mangrum and Jimmy Demaret in my way, but I had a hunch I could get by them, because I was playing consistently," Harper said.

Never Was Behind

In his last three 36-hole matches, against Mangrum, Demaret and Williams, the new boss of the pros was never behind his opponent.

He wound up his match play chores 23 under par, although several of his birdies were conceded ones.

Today's match between the two dark horses was a drab one most of the way. Williams, nervous at the start, went over par on the first three holes to give Harper a three-up lead, and Williams never got more than one of them back.

Williams, who lost seven pounds yesterday in his stirring match with Henry Picard (which he won on the thirty-eighth hole, after being six down and eight to play) grinned cheerfully in defeat.

"I just didn't play well enough," he said. "I had a lot of chances to win holes, but just couldn't take advantage of 'em."

Williams added the $1500 second prize to the $192 he had earned in nine previous tournaments this year. It was his fourth try in the PGA and in each of his previous tournaments he was ousted by scores of 7 and 6. Until today, Harper had never gotten past the second round in the big play-for-pay classic.

Harper was in trouble many times, but his magic putter pulled him through. The old fashioned tool is his pet club, he said, and he's had it for a decade. It's the one with which he set the world record of 20 putts in scoring a 63 in the third round of the Tucson meet.

CHANDLER "BRUSHING" UP—This is where Chandler Harper's second shot landed yesterday on the thirteenth hole of the PGA. final. Harper, from Portsmouth, Va., oddly enough, made the green on his recovery and wound up with a five for the hole. He went on to take the championship, 4 and 3, over Henry Williams of Secane, Pa.

Reds Sock Pirates, 8-3

Pittsburgh, June 27 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds poured it on the hapless Pittsburgh Pirates 8-3, tonight. Herm Wehmeier got credit for his fifth win of the year although he gave way to Ewell Blackwell in the seventh. Grady Hatton had a two-run homer for the Reds in the fourth.

Phillies Win On Three Hits, Take Over 1st

Boston, June 27 (AP).—The Philadelphia Phillies rapped out only three hits tonight but made the most of two of them to whip the Boston Braves, 3-2. One was Dick Sisler's two-run homer which just dropped into the right field bull pen. The first Quaker safety was a run-scoring double by Andy Seminick.

With the Giants drubbing Brooklyn, tonight's victory put the Phillies in first place in the National League, three percentage points ahead of the Cards.

Kuzava, Byrne Duel, But Harris Gets Win

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

New York, June 27.—Eddie Yost and Mickey Vernon clubbed Tommy Byrne's eight-game winning streak to a halt tonight and delivered a 4-3 victory for the Nats over the Yankees in 12 innings, before 31,297 aggrieved spectators.

Vernon applied the crushing blow. A three-run homer in the twelfth that unlocked the 1-1 tie Yost's timely home run had brought the Nats in the eighth.

With his third straight hit, Yost opened the twelfth inning against Byrne with a triple off the left field wall. Combs walked, but the pressure was eased for Byrne when Noren fouled out. Then it was that Vernon picked on a 3-and-1 pitch and walloped it 400 feet into the Yankee bullpen.

Co-hero of the Nats' triumph was Bob Kuzava, who dueled Byrne for 10 innings before he gave way to Mickey Harris, and was outpitching the Yankee southpaw whose last defeat was on April 27.

Kuzava held the Yanks to four hits for 10 innings, and the lone run he yielded was a cheapish thing in the third, scored on a Texas League single by Bauer.

Mickey Harris had to put down a desperate Yankee rally in the twelfth. They rocked him for two runs and had the winning run on third with one out before he turned 'em back for the sixth defeat in their last seven games.

Harris was threatening to waste the three-run lead Vernon's homer gave him. He walked Berra to start the Yank twelfth, and then was jolted for a single to center by Johnson. Then he walked Coleman to fill the bases with none out.

Henrich Pops Up

Confronted with the dangerous Tommy Henrich, and with the 31,297 N. Y. fans shrieking their hopes, Harris bore down and got rid of Henrich on a pop-up to Combs. He was in worse jeopardy a moment later though, when Pinch Hitter Johnny Mize singled to center, scoring two and moving Coleman to third with the tying run.

Now it was Rizzuto that Harris faced, and he quickly got two strikes over on him. Rizzuto banged a grounder toward Combs and it was double play—Combs to Dente to Vernon, and the Nats had the ball game.

Yankee double plays wrecked the Nats' scoring hopes on four occasions. They got nothing out of the second inning despite a walk to Mele and Ostrowski's single to center that put him on third with one out. On a foolhardy attempt to score after Dente's short line drive to Mapes, Mele was doubled up at the plate with yards to spare.

Evans led off the fifth with a freak-hopping single past Rizzuto, but one out later, Coleman started a double play on Yost's grounder. Combs led off the sixth with a single to right, and Noren bounced into another Coleman-to-Rizzuto-to-Collins D. P.

Cheap Run, At That

Meanwhile, though, Kuzava was doing a fancy job against the Yankees despite the 1-0 lead he yielded them in the third. It was a cheapish sort of run they got then. Two were out when Rizzuto beat out a hit to Yost and Mapes walked. Bauer raised a high fly into short center and it dropped for a single just beyond Dente's frantic clutch, scoring Rizzuto.

Like Kuzava, Byrne was also pitching three-hit ball for seven innings, until he suddenly bumped into Yost's game tying homer in the eighth with one out. It was a line drive smash into the convenient corner of the left field seats.

Byrne got himself out of a mess in the eleventh after the Nats put the tying run on third with one out. Mele single to left and Ostrowski lined a double to right. But in this crisis, Dente was held to a short fly to Bauer, Evans given an intentional pass and Pinch-Hitter Bob Ortiz popped up.

Kuzava pitched a fancy ninth and tenth inning before he retired for a pinch-hitter in the eleventh. He didn't allow anybody on base.

Whirl Along Distant 2d to $15.20 Shot

Delaware Park, Del., June 27.—After falls had taken toll from the eight-horse field, Mrs. Louise E. Stoddard's Port Raider galloped to an easy victory in the $5000 added Spring Maiden Steeplechase, today's featured fifth race.

Port Raider took command coming into the first hedge and was somewhat neglected in the wagering and returned a win mutuel of $15.20 for $2.

Brookmeade Stable's Whirl Along was closest to Port Raider at the finish and was beaten about 10 lengths while taking place money six lengths in front of C. Mahlon Kline's Tolbiac.

Mrs. Rex Howard Ousted in Women's Golf

Worsham Has 147 in NCAA

Albuquerque, N. Mex., June 27 (AP).—Marvin (Bubby) Worsham, twice schoolboy golf champion of Washington, D. C., today tacked a 73 onto his 74 of yesterday for a 147 36-hole score in qualifying play of the National Collegiate Athletic Association Golf Tournament.

Although he was only three-over par, the kid brother of former National Open Champion Lew Worsham was nine strokes off the hot pace Wake Forest's Palmer.

Palmer fired a four-under-par 69 today which gave him a 36-hole total of 138.

Three Naval Academy linksmen striving for a place among the 64 low scorers who start four days of match play tomorrow were Lee Baggett with 82-76—156, A. D. Williams with 78-77—155 and R. F. Wiseman with 84-76—160.

Rock, Hardheads

Light Sinkers, Green Shrimp Bring the Fish A-Running

By Ralph Murdock

THERE ARE always new wrinkles you can learn while fishing, says Sid Atlas, who has been selling fishing tackle and bait in Washington for over 20 years.

Murdock

After a dismal chumming trip to Old Cedar Point Lighthouse off Solomon's Island, Sid, his brother-in-law, Ben Furman, and Sal Adelman, pulled in at Point Patience for a try.

No fish had they caught and things were looking exceptionally gloomy. As a last resort, they anchored and started still fishing. With light sinkers and green shrimp for bait they made their last stand. The experiment paid off in dividends, for they landed 32 pan-size rock and 36 hardheads. Their success was achieved near the pilings between Solomons Island and Point Patience on the eastern side of the Patuxent River.

WHAT MAY prove to be a season's record tautog was a 13½-pounder caught at Chincoteague, Va., last week by Miss Margaret Cowden of the Bell Telephone Co. The fish was 28½ inches long and had a girth of 23 inches. The "hello girl" brought the fish to net with a 3½-ounce hollow glass rod and an 18-pound test nylon line, using a sand flea for bait.

THE RECENT hot spell has helped the local fishing situation materially. Several honest-to-goodness catches of hardheads were made on Monday. The catches were made in shoal waters off Herring Bay.

Talbert Wins, Trabert Bows At Wimbledon

Wimbledon, England, June 27 (AP).—The ever changing Wimbledon trend swung to poker-faced Billy Talbert today as the No. 1 choice to win the men's singles in the All-England Lawn Tennis championships.

The 31-year-old second seeded campaigner from New York glided into the third round past Marcel Coen of Egypt, 6—1, 6—3, 6—0.

Talbert's success highlighted an action-filled day which also saw two Americans bow out of play.

A development in the raised eyebrows department was the appearance of Gertrude (Gussy) Moran in almost plain blouse and shorts outfit—no frills and not a sign of lace. She defeated Mrs. M. Lagerborb of Sweden, 6—4, 8—6.

The first American of the day to lose out was Marta Barnett of Coral Gables, Fla., who was beaten by Nancy Chaffee of Los Angeles, 6—3, 6—4, in a first rounder.

Then Tony Trabert, the young Cincinnati racket wielder, bumped into Tony Mottram when the British Davis Cupper was having one of his best days. Mottram won handily, 6—1, 6—4, 6—1. The Briton's passing shorts worked beautifully and he upset Trabert's normally good net game.

Of the big four in men's play, only top-seeded Frank Sedgman of Australia ran into any difficulty. The 22-year-old Australian champion, favoring his strained right wrist, had to play 75 minutes to eliminate Robert Haillet, an unrated Frenchman, 6—4, 8—6, 6—2.

Louise Brough, the blond defending champion from Santa Monica, Calif., got off to a good start by downing Mrs. A. C. Brighton of England, 6—0, 6—1.

Results in today's matches include:

MEN'S SINGLES—Bill Talbert, New York, defeated Marcel Coen, Egypt, 6—1, 6—3, 6—0. Budge Patty, Los Angeles, defeated S. L. E. Sawnhy, India, 6—2, 6—0, 6—0. Fred Kovaleski, Detroit, defeated Hedley Baxter, Britain, 3—6, 6—3, 6—3, 6—4. Ari Larsen, San Francisco, beat Lennart Bergelin, Sweden, 6—3, 3—7, 7—5, 7—5. Vic Seixas, Philadelphia, beat Jack Brichant, Belgium, 6—4, 6—3, 6—3. Gardner Mulloy, Miami, Fla., beat N. Kumar, India, 6—2, 6—4, 12—10. Tony Mottram, Britain, beat Tony Trabert, Cincinnati, 6—1, 6—4, 6—1. Irvin Dorfman, New York, beat Enrique Morea, Argentina, 6—4, 6—2, 6—1.

WOMEN'S SINGLES (FIRST ROUND)

Doris Hart, Jacksonville, Fla., defeated Kay Tuckey, Britain, 6—4, 8—6; Barbara Scofield, San Francisco, defeated Miss H. Stoodley-Morgan, Britain, 6—4, 6—1; Nancy Morrison, Palm Beach, Fla., defeated Mrs. P. L. Cowney, Britain, 6—1, 6—2; Nancy Chaffee, Los Angeles, defeated Marta Barnett, Coral Gables, Fla., 6—3, 6—4; Mrs. Maria Weiss, Argentina, defeated Mrs. Annalisa Bossi, Italy, 6—1, 5—7, 6—3; Mrs. Helen Ribbany, Boston, defeated Mrs. E. C. Peters, Britain, 6—0, 6—4; Dorothy Head, Alameda, Calif., defeated Mrs. F. F. Behr, Britain, 6—2, 6—3; Mrs. Betty Hilton Harrison, Britain, defeated Mrs. R. D. McKelvie, Britain, 6—2, 6—1.

WOMEN'S SINGLES (SECOND ROUND)

Shirley Fry, Akron, Ohio, defeated Susan Partridge, Britain, 6—3, 6—2; Louise Brough, Beverly Hills, Calif., defeated Mrs. A. C. Brighton, Britain, 6—0, 6—1; Gerirude Moran, Santa Monica, Calif., defeated Mrs. M. Lagerborg, Sweden, 6—4, 8—6; Mrs. Margaret Osborne Dupont, Wilmington, Del., defeated Miss F. Cooke, Britain, 6—0, 6—2; Mrs. Pat Todd, La Jolla, Calif., defeated Mrs. G. M. Worrall, Britain, 6—0, 6—0.

Co-Medalist Loses to Henderson

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

Co-Medalist Mrs. Rex Howard of Kenwood was ousted yesterday in the first round of The Women's District Golf Association Championships at Indian Spring.

Mrs. D. H. Henderson, women's champion of Congressional Country Club, turned the trick, taking the last two holes to win, 2 up.

Miss Betty Garber of Argyle, who tied Mrs. Howard for the low qualifying score with an 83, had a narrow escape in the first round.

Mrs. Henry Riley of Washington carried her to the ninteenth hole before losing, 1 up.

Defending Champion, Mrs. A. B. Bower of Manor eliminated Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith of Woodmont handily, 5 and 3. Mrs. Betty Meckley, Kenwood's number one player, scored the most one-sided victory of the day, defeating Manor's Mrs. George Martin, 7 and 6.

Play resumes today and continues through Friday. Yesterday's results and today's pairings:

House Votes Funds To Meet U. S. Agency Payrolls After July 1

The House yesterday approved by a voice vote an emergency resolution to provide Federal agencies with funds to meet their payrolls after July 1. The measure was sent to the Senate.

Chairman Cannon of the House Appropriations Committee said it was clear that the omnbus appropriation bill carrying funds for all Federal agencies would be enacted into law by the deadline next Saturday. The 1951 fiscal year will begin on that day.

Representative Taber of New York, ranking Republican member of the committee, objected mildly to the resolution. He said it made no provision to reduce both the President's budget and Federal personnel as provided in the House-approved Taber-Thomas and Jensen amendments to the big budget bill.

Taber then offered such an amendment, which would have forced immediate firings in both Federal agencies. The amendment was rejected by a voice vote.

The vote was viewed by some people as a weakening by the House in its support of the two sweeping economy riders. On the other hand, the vote was inconclusive since very few members were on the floor at the time.

The resolution continued the ban on grade promotions for employes of the Office of the Housing Expediter. Furthmore, the language made it plain that only OHE was affected. Under the measure, no OHE employe can be given a salary in a grade higher than he held on May 22.

This newest resolution will expire on July 31, or until the omnibus appropriation bill is finally written into law.

RETIREMENT: The House yesterday approved and sent to the White House the conference report on H. R. 4295, the bill to benefit 100,000 retired Federal workers.

The report would give these persons an increase in both their annuities and survivorship benefits. It amends the April 1, 1948, law that gave them their choice of one of the two benefits.

The President is likely to sign the report into law. However, it has its opponents within the Administration who feel the measure would be too big a drain on the Civil Service retirement fund.

MARITIME: It is going through a major shake-down and reorganization. Commerce Secretary Sawyer last night announced that the responsibility for operating the Maritime Board had been placed in three new offices, which are:

(1) Office of Subsidy and Government Aids; (2) Maritime Operations, and (3) Comptroller, John R. Paul was appointed comptroller. No appointments to the other two offices were announced.

In addition, A. J. Williams was named secretary; Ralph H. Hallett, chief of regulation, and Gus Basham, chief examiner. They will serve under the Maritime board.

Serving both the board and the Maritime administrator will be Francis S. Walker, general counsel; H. M. Hochfeld, budget director, and Clyde L. Miller, personnel director. Lemuel Smith was appointed chief of the claims division, and the labor relations office was abolished and its functions transferred to the administrator.

The reorganization, effective today, was drafted by John T. Koehler, temporary chairman of the Maritime Board. Koehler promised it would be economical as well as efficient.

Secretary Sawyer will appoint Earl Clark as acting deputy administrator of Maritime, a top job set up under the President's reorganization plan that transferred the agency to Commerce. Clark has been an assistant to Sawyer.

BIG BUDGET: The Senate Appropriations Committee hopes to report out the omnibus budget bill on Saturday. That is its goal. It is questionable whether it can be reached.

56 Firemen Promoted Contingent On Funds

40 New Positions Are Created In Anticipation Of 60-Hour Week

The District Commissioners yesterday created 40 new fire department positions needed under the proposed 60-hour work week for firemen.

However, this action, and the 56 tentative promotions that accompanied it were conditioned on availability of funds for the shorter week.

Litteral

The action is effective July 1 or as soon thereafter as funds are appropriated, according to Charles Stofberg, special assistant to Commissioner John Russell Young. Funds to shorten the work week from 72 hours are in the District budget now before Congress.

New jobs include a third deputy chief, four battalion chiefs and 35 sergeants. The 16 additional promotions were necessary to fill resulting vacancies in lower ranks.

Galer

Scroggins

The department had previously announced it has selected candidates from a Civil Service list to create 146 new privates. The added men are needed to plug gaps that will appear when and if the duty week is shortened from six to five days.

Heading the list of promotions was Battalion Chief Fred Litteral slated as a deputy chief under the change. Litteral, now commanding the Fifth Battalion, is 50 years old and has been a fireman nearly 29 years.

Price

Tentatively promoted to the four new positions of battalion chief were:

Captains Charles L. Galer, 47, of No. 1 Engine Co.; Francis D. Scroggins, 50, of No. 19 Engine Co.; Walter A. Weber, 54, No. 3 Engine Co., and Elmer F. Stein, 45, No. 24 Engine Co. Capt. Leiper F. Price, 55, No. 2 Truck Co., tentatively was promoted to battalion chief to fill the vacancy caused by Litteral's promotion.

Stein

Barnes

Lieutenants tentatively promoted to captain were:

Barry

Sweeney

Sergeants who could become lieutenants are:

Clarence J. Short, 41, No. 4 Engine Co.; William L. Fielder, 47, Rescue Squad No. 2; Pearson Talbott, 48, No. 24 Engine Co.; Herbert O. Wheeler, 53, No. 9 Truck Co.; Myron R. Rose, 51, No. 27 Engine Co.

Takoma Park's 'Gay Nineties'

The Washington Post

PREVIEW—Takoma Park will observe the sixtieth anniversary of its incorporation July 1 to July 4. The four-day celebration, which will reach its climax on Independence Day with special events, will have a "Gay Nineties" motif. Yesterday flowing mustachios and costumes were in evidence in a preview of the coming events. Flora Morris of the Suburban National Bank, Takoma Park, Md., accepted a deposit from Max W. Shoup, both appropriately dressed for the preview

6 Crash Victims

Expectant Mother Hurt In Collision

An expectant mother was among six persons injured—none seriously—in a two-car collision at 2d and Rittenhouse sts. nw. last night.

Mrs. Mavis R. Gonnella, 19, of 5809 Cleveland ave., Riverdale, a passenger in a car driven by Americo V. Zancan, 22, of 820 7th st. ne., was treated for bruises at Emergency Hospital, and transferred to Homeopathic Hospital for observation.

Her husband, Thomas J., also a passenger, said the car was headed for a hospital to check on his wife's pregnant condition at the time of the crash. Gonnella, a Capital Transit driver, was uninjured.

Police reported the accident took place shortly after 7 p. m., when Zancan's car collided with an auto driven by Mrs. Claire Posner, 41, of 5412 8th st. nw.

Also a passenger in the overturned Zancan vehicle was Frances Griffith, 17, of 727 4th st. ne. Mrs. Posner and her daughter Elaine, in the other car, were treated for shock, the others for minor cuts and bruises, and released.

A hearing has been ordered.

Improved School Basement Sought By 500 Petitioners

District Commissioners yesterday received a petition bearing more than 500 signatures asking their help in finishing the basement at the Rudolph School, 2d and Hamilton sts., nw. for student assemblies and P-TA meetings.

Mrs. Harry L. Walker, Keene-Randolph P-TA secretary, said the school has no auditorium. The basement is the only space available for large meetings, but it needs double doors, more lighting and a smooth-finish floor, she said.

The Commissioners agreed to give the project "due consideration" if it appeared in the Board of Education's 1952 budget, Mrs. Walker said. School officials said the work would cost about $75,000. They said it was on a project list, but that several other jobs were ahead of it.

Friends to Close Guest House Hit By Zoning Code

Davis House, the free international guest house at 2410 Wyoming ave. nw., which was denied permission to continue by the District Board of Zoning Adjustment last week, will close July 1, it was announced yesterday.

Mrs. Grace S. Lowry, hostess at the house for the American Friends Service Committee, said the group will seek another location.

Testimony before the zoning board was to the effect that the late owner, Mrs. Bancroft Davis, entertained foreign guests at the house "in the interest of international friendship," and left it to the committee when she died in 1946 to continue the work.

Such use by the committee was found to be a zoning violation in an area of single family homes. Neighbors objected to its continued operation because of noise.

School Bonds To Boost Rents, Official Says

Arlington Treasurer Warns County Apartment Dwellers

The Arlington County treasurer has written to 64 apartment owners in the county, urging them to tell their tenants that rent increases will "necessarily" follow adoption of a suggested $8,700,000 school bond issue.

The letters were sent June 14 from the office of Treasurer John Locke Green.

In the letter, Green said "there are a great many people, most of whom live in apartment houses, who have a notion that increased taxation does not affect them."

He suggested that apartment owners "advise" their tenants that higher taxes, which will "undoubtedly" result from a new bond issue, "must necessarily be reflected in rent increases."

The Fairmac Corporation, which this week announced that it will raise Fairlington rents an average 9 percent, enclosed mimeographed copies of the letter with the rent hike notices distributed to tenants. Virginia rent control ended Sunday.

A foe of Arlington's previous school bond issues, which have totaled about 6 million dollars in the past several years, Green said yesterday the letters are part of an "educational program." He said he had spent from $200 to $300 out of his own pocket for the letters, plus the cost of about 5000 copies of a pamphlet criticizing present school construction costs.

Both the Arlington County Council of P-TAs and the County Civic Federation have indorsed a school bond issue of between 8 and 9 million dollars, to be voted on as soon as possible.

Balance of School Bonds To Be Sold in Arlington

The Arlington County School Board last night voted to sell the remaining $2,250,000 of its $4,750,000 bond issue to finance school construction at Washington-Lee and Hoffman-Boston High Schools.

The action is the last step in selling the bond issue authorized in November, 1948, of which $2,500,000 already is being used to build county schools. To be financed by the $2,250,000 approved last night will be a new gymnasium and science classroom at Washington-Lee and a new gymnasium, cafeteria and shop at Hoffman-Boston High School for Negroes.

The board also voted to appeal to the Arlington County Board a decision by a county building inspector on construction of the Hoffman-Boston elementary school.

Montgomery Council Asks 5 Ct. Tax Cut

'50-51 Reduction Is Proposed in Levy Providing Special Services

A five-cent reduction in the suburban district tax—with no increase in the $1.90 general county levy—was proposed last night by the Montgomery County Council for the 1950-1951 fiscal year.

The council suggested increases totalling $280,000 on 33 items in County Manager Irving G. McNayr's $9,053,025 operating budget, and $245,000 on four items in his $10,253,700 capital improvements budget.

But Councilman Thomas C. Kelley pointed out that the operating budget increases are almost perfectly balanced by (1) increased State receipts, (2) savings in other parts of the county manager's proposed budget, and (3) a county surplus of about $250,000.

McNayr said the $245,000 in new items in the capital improvements budget would be compensated for by postponing other capital improvement projects and applying earmarked funds to immediate capital items.

When he proposed his 1950-1951 budget, McNayr recommended a three-cent increase in the $1.90 general county tax rate per $100 assessed evaluation. He also asked a five-cent cut in the 20-cent suburban tax rate, which provides special services to suburban residents only.

According to the council, the total budget figures, based on suggested cuts and increases, will be announced Friday at 2 p. m. during a public hearing on the proposals.

The amount and place of the budget cuts were not released last night. One of the proposed capital increases was $100,000 to improve River rd. from Esworthy rd. northwest to the Potomac to link it with the proposed Washington-Cumberland Parkway.

Council President Frederic P. Lee said the new parkway would open up the section of the county it traverses, and the improved River rd. will be needed to handle commercial traffic.

Montgomery Names 5 To New Planning Board

The Montgomery County Council last night appointed five men to the new Upper Montgomery County Planning Commission, which will regulate planning, zoning and building regulations.

The members are Frederick Gutheim of Dickerson, Marshall Davis of Germantown, Kenneth Windham of Laytonville, and Lathrop E. Smith of Travilah, all farmers; and Councilman Thomas C. Kelley, Darnestown.

Order Signed Setting Aside Gas Raise

Judge T. Alan Goldsborough yesterday signed the order he issued two weeks ago, setting aside the $750,000 gas rate increase of November 7, but consumers have no prospect of immediate refunds.

The judge also signed an order overruling a motion filed by The Washington Gas Light Co., asking a delay pending appeal.

The matter of gas rates referred back to the Public Utilities Commission for hearing to conform with Judge Goldsborough's decision.

Before gas rates drop to their November level—an average of 6.14 percent less than today's rates, and before gas consumers are refunded the amount of the increased rates, the company has at least one further appeal.

Judge Goldsborough scheduled hearings Friday morning to determine whether the company can file a special appeal bond and thereby automatically stay execution of the judge's order pending appeal. If this order is stayed, C. Oscar Berry, company attorney, said.

It also is possible that the gas company might ask the Court of Appeals to set this bond, if Judge Goldsborough does not.

$15 Million FDIC Building Approved by Senate Group

A new 15-million-dollar building for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation was approved yesterday by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee.

The bill authorizing the structure, to be located in Washington, goes to the Senate. Construction would be with FDIC funds. The site is yet to be selected.

A marble building like that of the Federal Reserve Board is contemplated.

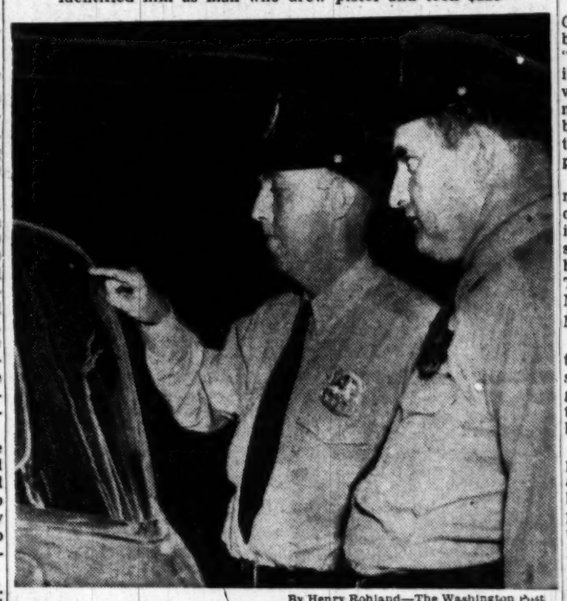
In other Capitol actions:

The House Public Works Committee approved a resolution to let the Agriculture Department spend $75,000 for a soil-conservation survey of the Potomac River Basin.

A Senate Public Works Subcommittee cleared the Federal highway-aid measure, increasing the estimated funds for District use by about a million dollars. The House had approved seven million dollars for the District for the fiscal years 1952 and 1953. The subcommittee fixed the figure at close to eight million dollars, committee aides said.

Man Who Lost on the Horses Arrested as Holdup Suspect

IN CUSTODY—Charles B. Foster, 29, of Waldorf, Md., (center) in custody of detectives, leaves scene of holdup at 2904 Minnesota ave. se., where liquor store manager, Edward J. O'Connor, identified him as man who drew pistol and took $225



By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

MADE ARREST—Pvts. John J. Forbes (left) and Lurty C. Houff riding in AIU Traffic Car 5, heard radio report and spotted Foster in his car shortly after the holdup. They stopped him at 4th and K sts. sw. The officers examine two bullet holes in the car. Foster said he had lost considerable sums at the races

A man who said he had lost heavily at the races was held for grand jury action yesterday on a charge of holding up and robbing a liquor store at 2904 Minnesota ave. se.

He was Charles B. Foster, 29, of Waldorf, Md. Police said Foster admitted holding up the store and robbing it of $225 yesterday morning.

Tells of Losses

When arrested, police said Foster had $642 belonging to the tobacco wholesaler for whom he works. They said he told them that he was about $245 short in the company funds because he had lost money betting on harness races at Laurel and Rosecroft.

"I bet $2 and $5 and sometimes as much as $25, but I kept on losing," police said Foster told them. "I guess it gets in your blood," police quoted Foster as saying.

Edward C. O'Connor, 22, Manager of the liquor store, said a man he lated identified as Foster entered the store at 10:30 a. m. yesterday and bought a soft drink.

O'Connor said he recognized the man as a salesman who had sold him tobacco supplies in the past.

Returned Hour Later

The man left and returned about an hour later. O'Connor said the man inquired about the price of various liquors, then finally said, "I can't get what I really want."

O'Connor said the man drew a pistol, took $225 and left.

The store manager snatched up a .38-caliber revolver and gave chase. He saw the bandit stepping into a car and fired three warning shots into the air. When the gunman drove off, O'Connor fired two shots at the car.

Car Forced to Curb

Pvts. Lurty C. Houff and John J. Forbes, riding in a police car, saw a car drive through an amber light at South Capitol and M sts. They crowed it to the curb at 4th and K sts. sw.

When detectives in the robbery squad cruiser arrived, in reply to a radioed request from Houff and Forbes, they found a Belgian Luger under the seat of the car, police said. They also found two bullet holes in the back of the car. Police said Foster admitted the holdup.

According to police, this is the third time the Minnesota ave. liquor store has been held up. In each case, they added, the bandit has been caught the same day of the holdup.

Arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence, Foster was held in $15,000 bond for action of the grand jury.

5c Rise Asked For 3400 D. C. Day Workers

The District Commissioners yesterday agreed to seek funds to give the city's 3400 per diem workers a 5-cent an hour wage increase.

The increase was recommended by the District Wage Board. Francis L. Timmons, its personnel officer, said it would be a flat 5-cent increase for all workers hired by the day. It would cost the city about $325,000 a year, he said.

Hourly wages for per diem workers now range from 95-cents for laborers to $1.78 for trade foremen, Timmons said.

Timmons said the recommendation was based on a survey the board had made of wages paid for similar work by the Federal Government and private industry.

District budget officials said the next step would be to send a request for a supplemental appropiation to Congress through the Bureau of the Budget.

D. C. Military District Men Are Promoted

Three master sergeants assigned to the Military District of Washington have been promoted to the rank of warrant officer, junior grade, it was announced yesterday.

They are Roland B. Mazzie, 261 North Barton st., Arlington, M. C. Northcutt, 217 Adams ave., Alexandria, and David L. Dreyer of South Post, Fort Myer. Mazzie is on duty with the military personnel section of military district headquarters, Northcutt and Dreyer are both master mechanics in the Pentagon motor center.

Area Homes' Children Are Guests of 40 and 8

About 300 children from seven area children's homes were treated to an all-day jamboree at Marshall Hall, Md., yesterday, as guests of the District of Columbia Grand Voiture 174 of the 40 & 8, and Salon Departmental 14 of the 8 & 40.

The children travelled down the Potomac River on the S.S. Mt. Vernon, and were treated to free rides, meals and entertainment at the Maryland resort.

New Battle Clouds Fate Of Day Care Continuance

Senate Committee Eliminates House Bill, Substitutes Permanent Plan

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A battle of District committees flared up yesterday over the Washington child day care center program, leaving its fate in doubt.

The program ends Friday, under existing law. The Senate voted several weeks ago to make it permanent. A House District subcommittee threw this plan into the wastebasket. As a substitute, the House District Committee recommended, and the House approved, a different bill for one more year of the centers.

House Bill Erased

Yesterday the Senate District Committee received the House bill, erased from it all but the "be it enacted" line and inserted instead the language of the bill which the Senate had passed. Next move is expected to be a request by Senate District leaders to send the permanent day care center program bill back to the House.

The decision by the Senate committee to insist on the permanent day care center program was unanimous. It followed appeals for support for the Senate's bill voiced by Senators Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.) and Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.).

Mrs. Smith Took Lead

Mrs. Smith originally had taken the lead in saying that the program should be made permanent, on the ground that it was too important to be handled on a year-to-year basis.

The Senate committee also approved two labor-sponsored bills, and sent them to the Senate. One boosts District unemployment compensation benefits. The other sets up standard procedures for wage payments in private industry.

Business groups had opposed key features of both bills in hearings. Committee members do not expect either measure to become law in this Congress.

12 Ask Change Of Government For Fairfax

Additional sentiment for change in the form of Fairfax County's government was expressed last night at the fifth in a series of hearings conducted by a 21-member government study commission.

The commission, which is expected to hand down an advisory report in September, heard a dozen speakers criticize what they termed inadequacy of the present government. Most of them advocated the county manager plan, one of four alternate forms available.

R. C. Faylor of Vernon Heights likened the present board of supervisors to the United Nations. "They can make a lot of recommendations and suggestions, but don't have the power to enforce them in a crisis," he said.

He advocated the county manager form as a system which would allow the supervisors to devote their time to the county's "gravest" problems while delegating authority to carry out less important functions to a full-time manager.

Newell Blair, a Belle Haven attorney, said the manager plan would enable the supervisors to appoint the school board, thus bringing the board "closer to the voters." The school board is now appointed by a board of trustees named by the Circuit Court judge, who himself is appointed by the General Assembly.

A number of speakers assailed health and sanitation facilities and road conditions in the county. They spoke in response to an invitation by David Lawrence, Washington columnist and chairman of the commission's executive committee for criticism of the present form of government.

Among others advocating the county manager form were Mrs. Edward Macy, president of the county's League of Women Voters; Mrs. Donald Wilkins of Falls Church; Arthur Bissell, jr., and James Hoofnagle, both of Tauxemont.

Arthur Schaffer, a member of the present board of supervisors, said he believed the county could be best served by a board composed of six supervisors from the six magisterial districts and three at large. The present board comprises one member from each of the six districts.

Beauty Shop Fined $25; Failed to Keep Records

Warner Beauty Studio, Inc., 509 11th st. nw., was fined $25 yesterday for failing to keep work-time records of women employes. Judge Walter J. Casey of Municipal Court imposed the penalty after a guilty plea for the corporation was made to the charge of violating the minimum wage regulations on beauty shops.

Dr. H. Sherman Iberly, newly installed president of Roanoke College, will speak at a luncheon meeting of alumni of the college at 12:30 p. m. today at the Army Navy Club, 17th and I sts. nw.

Stress Theology, Archbishop Says

Today's "tragic events" have illustrated that if theology is not the center of learning, learning will destroy man rather than benefit him, the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, archbishop of Washington, said yesterday.

He spoke to delegates to the fifth annual convention of the Catholic Theological Society of America following pontifical mass at St. Patrick's Church, 10th and G sts. nw. The convention, being held at the Hotel Washington, will conclude today.

The Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, was a guest of honor at the session following the mass.

Archbishop O'Boyle declared that the evils of our day are the result of "the perversion of the intellect" and are the work of those who have "boldly attempted to abolish sin by abolishing all allegience to the Creator."

He said it is "sad and dismaying" that the Nation feels threatened by "the intellectuals, those whom it formerly considered its elite guard." Those apprehended and prosecuted for crimes against the Nation's security have been "without exception, persons endowed with great intellectual ability and attainments," the archbishop said.

The "trail of treason,' he told theologians, "leads directly to those institutions of learning which disassociated all real knowledge from the course of truth—God; institutions which either disregarded theology as an outmoded myth or relegated it to a minor position among speculative studies."

"Theology alone can offer the solution to our problems and render us the inspiration necessary to reconstruct a Christian civilization," Archbishop O'Boyle said.

Into Suburbs

Population Shift Is Away From District

An economic and social study of Greater Washington showing the District of Columbia as the employment hub with population moving steadily outward has been prepared by the Bureau of Business and Economic Research of the University of Maryland.

The study, to be published today, shows that 65 percent of Marylanders in the metropolitan area commute to Washington jobs, as do 54 percent of Virginians in the area.

The District of Columbia included about 62 percent of the total metropolitan area population, the survey shows, but since 1940 the expansion has gone far beyond the District's immediate borders.

The University of Maryland study shows that points in Montgomery and Prince Georges County near Washngton had their greatest relative population increase between 1930 and 1940, while population has mushroomed in rural sections of these counties since 1940.

As a by-product of this conclusion, the survey points out that Arlington County reached the peak of its building permits in 1942, while Fairfax County in 1949 led the whole Metropolitan Area in number of permits issued. Prince Georges County was second.

Economic conclusions drawn in the survey show that individual income payments in Washington aggregate about two billion dollars; that outside Washington, Montgomery County has the largest dollar retail trade and the largest number of full work-week employes; that Prince Georges County had more service trade establishments than any other non-Washington sector.

Outside Washington, the survey shows, Prince Georges County was first in number of retail establishments, Montgomery County led in dollar sales and in number of employes and Arlington County was second in number of full work-week employes.

The report points out that residents of the Washington metropolitan area are frequent migrators. Between 1940 and 1947, 35 percent of the population either moved into the area or transferred from one section of the area to another.

The survey, prepared under Bureau Director Dr. John H. Cover, deplores lack of formal integration of activities for the entire area. With "split jurisdictions", the report states, "we draw political boundaries and then accept them as barriers to an integration of economic and social life."

"Federal Government buildings have been erected in Montgomery, Prince Georges and Arlington counties far beyond the jurisdiction of a Federal planning agency."

The report also analyzes utility services in greater Washington

Robert De Bruce Council of Kadosh Elects Merz Head

Merz

Albert R. Merz, a retired Government scientist of 5116 Chevy Chase pkwy. nw., last night was elected commander of the Robert De Bruce Council of Kadosh, one of the four coordinate bodies of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Free Masonry.

Others named at the annual meeting in the temple, 2800 16th st. nw., were Paul S. Kremer, first lieutenant-commander; Dr. William D. Redding, second lieutenant-commander; Clifford L. Johnson, chancellor, and Harold Gustafson, orator.

Reelected were Austin J. Leister, recorder; Raymond N. Babcock, treasurer; Dr. John C. Palmer, almoner, and Richard E. Titlow, trustee. Merz, Leister and Dr. Palmer are thirty-third degree Masons.

The fall class of the rite will open September 16 through December.

Value of Land In Annexable Area Disputed

Falls Church and Fairfax County attorneys yesterday were a million dollars apart in their estimates of the assessed value of the land Falls Church wants to annex.

An out-of-court discussion of the land's worth was unofficially reported to have produced this difference. A formal report on the conference will be made today to the three-judge court that is hearing the annexation suit.

It was reliably understood that Falls Church attorneys say the assessed value of the land, without public improvements, is 11 million dollars, while Fairfax County attorneys say the land is worth 12 million dollars.

Fairfax County would benefit from the higher value estimate, since Falls Church—if it wins the annexation suit—must pay to Fairfax County a sum to be determined by the court to compensate for loss of the land. The court will consider, in addition to assessed land value, such public improvements as schools and sewers.

In-court developments in the annexation suit yesterday were confined to efforts by Falls Church City Clerk Harry Wells to prove that a number of Falls Church organizations have a community interest in the success of the annexation suit.

Wells cited 12 organizations, including churches, veerans and youth groups, which he said had a larger membership outside the present limits of Falls Church than within the city proper.

The court recessed at noon after beginning its second week of hearing testimony in the suit.

Alexandria Cigarette Tax Gets Go-Ahead

Alexandria's city Council last night agreed to go ahead with plans for a two-cent a pack cigarette tax beginning July 1.

The council approved the tax earlier in the month, but a delegation of citizens appeared at the meeting last night to protest against the measure. City officials have predicted the tax will bring $50,000 into the city's coffers during the remainder of the year and help reduce a municipal deficit.

In another action, the council approved of a measure outlawing use or sale of air guns inside the city limits.

Approved on its first reading was a measure which will make self-service gas stations illegal in the community.

On recommendation of one of its committees, the council re-elected Edward Reed and J. S. Everly to the school board.

Park & Tilford Votes To Change Firm Name

New York, June 27 (AP).—Stockholders of Park & Tilford, Inc., have voted to change the name of the corporation to Park & Tilford Distillers Corp., and to make it an operating company.

Arthur D. Schulte, president, said the new name will more clearly reflect major Park & Tilford activities: the distillation and distribution of whiskies and importation and distribution of liquors and wines.

Prince Georges Orders Probe Of Cab Fees

A request by a Montgomery County taxicab operator for permission to answer calls in Prince Georges County yesterday led to an order by the Prince Georges Commissioners for an investigation of taxi rates and licensing fees in the county.

The request by Lee W. Jones, operator of the Silver Spring Cab Company, was turned down by the commissioners on the recommendation of Cab Inspector Harry Mercer. Jones, through his attorney, Henry A. Babcock, specially sought sanction to pick up riders in the Takoma Park section of Prince Georges in response to telephone requests.

Testimony on the disparity of rates in the two counties led Commissioner T. Hammond Welsh to propose a study of Prince Georges rates by Mercer with a view toward reduction.

Mercer said the Prince Georges rates are 30 cents for the first mile and 10 cents for each one-third of a mile thereafter. Montgomery operators charge 25 cents for the first two miles and 25 cents a mile thereafter, Jones said.

A study of licensing charges also was ordered. The present fee is $25 per cab.

At yesterday's meeting the commissioners also authorized issuance of bonds not to exceed $325,000 to meet higher-than-estimated school construction costs.

In another action the commissioners ruled that their 2-2 tie vote on a commercial zoning application last week for a lot in the 4300 block of Hamilton st., Hyattsville, had the effect of disapproval.

NBC Signs Up Allen and Cantor For Video Series

Fred Allen and Eddie Cantor were signed yesterday by the National Broadcasting Co. for a series of Sunday night television shows that will use four alternating masters of ceremonies. The weekly shows, scheduled to begin about October 1, will use a different emcee each week of the month and then begin again with the same series of comedians.

No announcement has been made about the other two, but Bob Hope who has already done several special television shows for NBC, and Groucho Marx, who recently switched from CBS to NBC, have been discussed as likely possibilities along with the comedy team of Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis.

The variety shows are expected to cost $50,000 a week for talent alone.

Oiler Killed In Accident At Roundhouse

Clarence Chisholm, 56, an oiler employed by the Washington Terminal Co. for 30 years, was decapitated in the turntable pit at Ivy City roundhouse at about 8:45 a. m. yesterday.

Police said Chisholm apparently slipped or was leaning over too far when the heavy mechanism began to revolve. His head was caught between the turntable and the wall of the roundhouse.

Chisholm, who lived at 1618 Montello ave. ne., was pronounced dead at the scene by a Health Department physician. His body was removed to the morgue. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of accidental death.

William Poland Dies; Advised Several Nations on Railroads

William Babcock Poland, retired civil and consulting engineer died at his home, 1675 31st st. nw. Monday following a stroke.

Mr. Poland

He had been in poor health for two years.

Mr. Poland was connected with the railroad building industry for more than 30 years and had been an adviser on railroads for many foreign countries. He was an economic consultant for the Economic Defense oBard and the Board of Economic Warfare during World War II.

Born in West Point, N. Y., he was the son of Gen. John S. Poland and Mrs. Anne Babcock Poland. He was graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology with honors in mathematics.

In 1903 he served with the Alaska Central Railroad Co., and from 1906 to 1913 he aided in building and operating the Philippine railroad.

During World War I he was an assistant to Herbert Hoover in administering relief in France and Belgium and later became director of the relief program for Europe. For this work the government of France made him a member of the Legion of Honor and governments of Belgium and Poland presented him with decorations.

As a member of the military mission to Armenia after the war he prepared plans for railway and harbor systems for Asia Minor and Armenia. Later he worked on the problem of industrial development and finances in Yugoslavia, where he was commissioner general in charge of reorganization of ports, railways and inland transportation.

In 1926 he was invited by the Shah of Persia to determine main lines and begin construction of the railway system there. He served later as an adviser to the Chinese Ministry of Railways.

He was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Railway Engineering Association, the American Institute of Consulting Engineers, the Cosmos Club, the Army-Navy Country Club, and the Engineers Club in New York.

Survivors are his wife, Mrs. Dorothy Hoffin Poland, and one son, William B. Poland, jr., also of the 31st st. address.

Funeral services will be at 10:30 a. m. Friday in Bethlehem Chapel at the Washington Cathedral, with burial at Arlington Cemetery.

SANSOM, JESSIE E. A tribute of love and devotion to the memory of our dear little Mother JESSIE E. SANSOM, whom God called to rest four years ago today, June 28, 1946.
We have only your memory, dear Mother,
To remember our whole lives through,
But the sweetness will linger forever
As we treasure the image of you.
Your thoughts were so full of us.
You never could forget
And so we think that where you are,
You must be watching yet.
Your heart was the truest in all the world
Your love the best to recall,
For no one on the earth can take your place
You are still the dearest of all.
Always,
YOUR BABIES.

Stay-at-Homes Aren't Short of Parties

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

WHILE it's chic to have left for Europe or Maine, lots of chic has been left behind. It's hot, it's true, but not too hot for the gregarious to give or go to a party. A number of small gatherings yesterday, mostly in the late afternoon, kept things moving.

Dr. Wilhelm Taucher, chief central bureau of ERP affairs, and former Austrian Minister of Commerce, was the guest in whose honor the Austrian Economic Counselor, Wilhelm Goertz, and Mrs. Goertz entertained at a cocktail party at the Brighton Hotel.

Guests gathered in the cool drawing room on the main floor of the hotel. ECA officials and diplomatic chiefs of ECA countries headed the guest list.

Those attending included the Austrian Minister and Mme. Kleinwachter, the Dutch Ambassador and Mme. Philipse; M. Demont, head of the French ECA mission; Pierre Siraud, French Counselor; Joseph Harsch, Mr. and Mrs. E. Gelsinger of FAO, and Mrs. Eleanor Dulles.

Military Gather For Reception

MILITARY representatives of the Latin American Republics and their wives were guests of honor at a reception yesterday given by Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Charles L. Bolte who entertained at the Officers Club at Fort McNair. General Bolte is head of the plans and training division of the Department of the Army.

As the senior member of the Military, Naval and Air Attaches of Latin American Embassies, Maj. Gen. Edgar do Amaral, Military Attache of the Brazilian Embassy, and Mme. Amaral, were in the receiving line. Also welcoming guests with General and Mrs. Bolte were Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Thomas S. Timberman and Col. and Mrs. Paul S. Freeman. Mrs. Bolte wore a full-skirted black organdy gown embroidered in yellow.

Among the guests were Rear Admiral and Mrs. O. B. Hardison who were entertained later by the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. Forrest Sherman abroad the Navy yacht, the Sequoia. Admiral Hardison, who is retiring as director of Pan American Affairs, U. S. Naval Mission, is to be transferred to Guam where he will be in command of the Mariana Islands.

The Ambassador of Pakistan, M. A. H. Ispahani, left yesterday for New York to meet the Prime Minister of Pakistan, Liaquat Ali Khan, who left a hospital in Boston, Mass., the same day. The Prime Minister and the Begum are due to go to London en route to Karachi on July 2.

Legion Commander Honored at Party

GEORGE N. CRAIG, National Commander of the American Legion, and Mrs. Craig, were the guests in whose honor Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. McGinnis entertained at cocktails yesterday at the Army Navy Country Club. Commander Craig is here to preside at the mid week meeting of the national advisory committee of the organization. Mrs. Craig joined him here from their home in Brazil, Ind.

Among the guests invited were Senator and Mrs. William E. Jenner, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Lewis B. Hershey from the Hoosier State; Senator and Mrs. Pat McCarran, Senator and Mrs. Owen Brewster, Senator and Mrs. Leverett Saltonstall, Senator and Mrs. John W. Sparkman, Senator and Mrs. Homer Ferguson, Senator and Mrs. Edward J. Thye, Senator and Mrs. John W. Bricker, Senator and Mrs. Edward Martin.

Among others asked were Senator Joseph McCarthy, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Biffle, Senator and Mrs. Harry Cain, Representative and Mrs. Charles Halleck, Representative and Mrs. Lawrence Smith, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Representative Cecil Harden, Representative and Mrs. Hugh Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Robert LeBaron, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Burks Summers, Mr. and Mrs. Auguste Boas, Mr. and Mrs. Watson B. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Foote, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Robichaud, and Mr. and Mrs. George Benoit.

AMIDST a sea of bubbles—champagne, that is—Mrs. Alben Barkley christened the S S President Jackson, a round-the-world liner, in noon ceremonies yesterday at Camden, N. J. The Vice President made an address and a luncheon followed in honor of the ship's sponsor

Mayor of Madras Guest at Embassy

THE Mayor of Madras, India, Dr. P. V. Cherian, was honored yesterday at a cocktail party given at the Indian Embassy by the Public Relations Attache and Mrs. M. K. Unni Nayar. C. R. Srinivasan, editor of the Swadesamitran newspaper and president of the All-India Newspaper Conference, shared honors with the Mayor. Both gentlemen attended the International Rotary convention held recently in Detroit, Mich., and are on their way back to India.

Mme. Pandit, Ambassador of India, returned from a visit to New York in time to attend the party. Other guests included Mr. and Mrs. Elbert G. Mathews and Joseph Sparks of the State Department, Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Kuhn, Mr. and Mrs. John Henry, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Weil and many more.

Friends in Washington will be interested to learn that Abram Stevens Hewitt of New York, Washington and White Post, Va., has announced the engagement of his daughter, Mary Ashley Cooper Hewitt to Richard Renville Harshman, also of New York, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Charles Harshman of Cincinnati.

The bride-elect is the daughter of the late Mrs. Hewitt who was Louise Vanderbilt Schieffelin. She was graduated from Foxcroft and Bennington College, and is now a student and a member of the Art Students League of New York.

Mr. Harshman, who's with J. P. Morgan Co., attended Andover, Harvard University and Harvard Business School. He's a member of the Fox Club, and Hasty Pudding Institute of 1770.

New Rochelle Alumnae Plan Next Season

The newly elected officers of the Washington Chapter of the College of New Rochelle Alumnae Association met recently at the home of Miss Margaret Garvey of Chevy Chase, president, to discuss plans for the coming year.

The tentative schedule calls for a monthly meeting from September to June, beginning with a tea in honor of the incoming freshmen from the Washington area. Other events outlined include a bridge and canasta party in October, a square dance in November, and a dinner meeting with a prominent speaker in December. At this meeting, clothing will be collected for Providence Hospital, as has been the custom for several years.

Besides Miss Garvey, officers elected for the coming year are Miss Regina Meany of Bethesda, vice president, Miss Patricia McLaughlin of Alexandria, treasurer, and Miss Mary Theresa Heveran of Arlington, secretary. Any alumnae of the College of New Rochelle living in this area who are not in contact with the chapter are asked to call the secretary at JAckson 2-4736.

Tobe Says...

For the past two or three summers slacks have been pushed a little to one side in favor of the reigning fashion favorite—shorts. But this year we're having a slacks revival again.

It really started last winter with the smart dress-up "pants" costumes that women started wearing for television evenings at home. Remember I called your attention to it way back in November.

In summer slacks, tapered legs are the newest fashion.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Thirtyish Woman Has Two Beaus; One She Loves And the Other She'd Never Miss, But the First Is Noncooperative About Marriage; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In my opinion, it is the hallmark of maturity to be able to think straight, make decisions and carry them through to some conclusion. I've been trying to do this in relation to a personal problem, and I want your estimate of my decision.

I am in my early thirties and very interested in getting married. During the past year I've been seeing Tom and Bill, whom I rated good husband material after a few dates. In background, religion, character, in fact in all the fundamentals we are told to consider in choosing a mate, they both measured up to my highest hopes. I decided to let nature take its course.

As months went by I felt a growing sense of rapport with Tom, as to interests, outlook and comradeship. Mentally, spiritually and physically I felt I had found someone with whom I had everything in common. And as for Bill, I felt he could walk out of my life without being missed.

Feels She Must Quit Both Men

HOWEVER, the problem is that Tom tells me of family financial responsibilities (verified by friends) that make marriage impossible for a long time, if at all. He feels I should make every effort to meet other men who don't present such a hopeless case. Bill would marry me immediately. But if I take him, it would be only because I didn't expect to meet anyone else I could really care for; and I suppose there is always a chance that I might learn to love him after marriage.

The weaker me says, "Marry Bill; you'll have a nice home, a devoted husband; many women make loveless marriages." But without mutual love I cannot foresee a happy outcome. Am I thinking straight? Please advise. E. B.

More Resigned Than Decisive

DEAR E. B.: You invite comment on your "decision," but I don't see that you've made a decision. At most you've simply conceded the finality of Tom's insistence that he's not serious. Beyond that you bog down in indecision when you try to think through a plan of action for yourself.

As for Tom's financial laments, perhaps I should explain that it is never economics nor family parasites, but rather the individual's emotional conditioning, that keeps him (or her) single to a late age. Thus Tom's arguments for dismissing you—after pleasuring his ego by fanning your interest to matrimonial pitch—are merely his excuses, not his reason, for adherence to bachelorhood. If he truly wanted to marry you, he would wage a hopeful case.

About Bill: What makes you think you are confined to a choice of either marrying him without love on the rebound, or having nothing more to do with him? Why can't you keep him around as a friend, if he's willing to linger and take his chances?

Her Attitude Is Defeatist

YOUR notion that you must make a clean break with both men is a shock reaction to rejection, not the fruit of "straight thinking." You are deeply hurt and profoundly discouraged by Tom's non-cooperative attitude, so much so that you hardly expect to care greatly again. And although you talk of enlarging your list of men friends, your defeatist impulse is to give up the struggle one way or another—either by leaping into a loveless marriage or scrapping even the beaus you have.

For advice, don't try so tensely to handle this emotional crisis in executive fashion. In so doing, you accelerate conflict in your personality. Rather, let the storm spend itself. On the subjective side, accept the truth of your feelings, pro and con, about your frustration. Digest the fact that Tom has been a heartbreaking associate, but recognize also that your devotion to him has enriched you, in the sense that it exercised and affirmed your innate disposition to love greatly. This experience just of itself is a blessing which cautiously defensive persons don't achieve.

On the social side, stop rushing things. Don't break with either man. Just let the lost cause slide gracefully, and thank Heaven you have Bill for a friend in time of need.

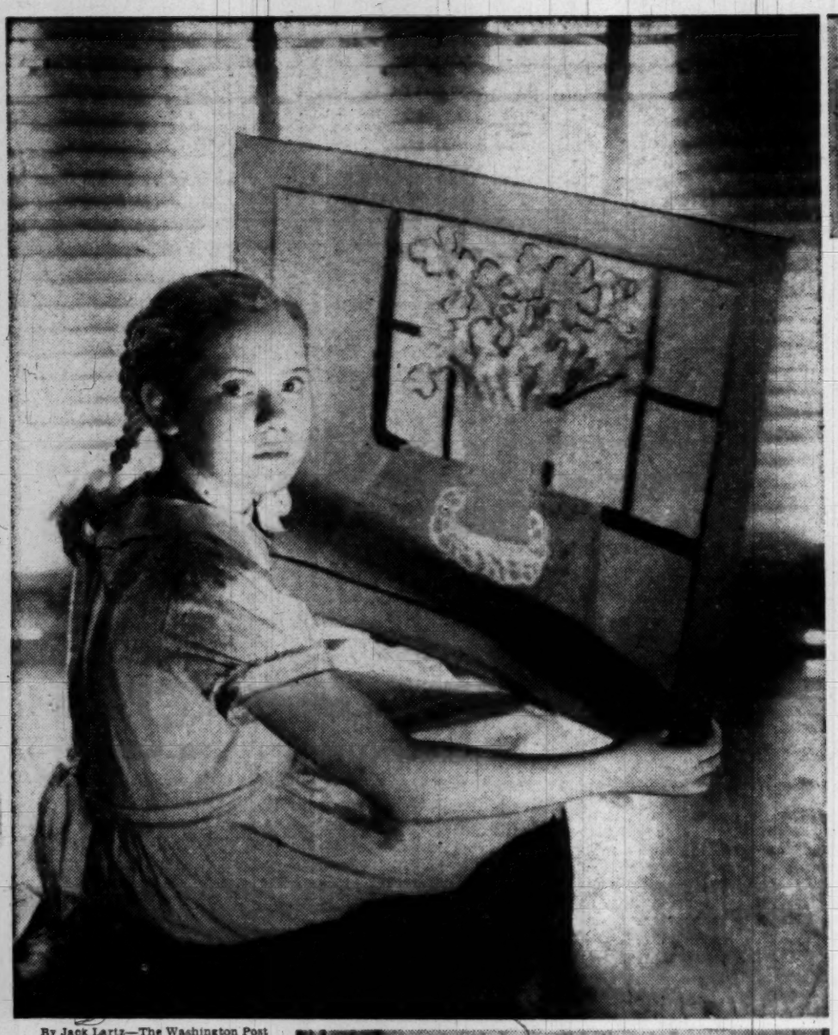
JOSEPH R. HARRIS



By Jack Lartz—The Washington Post

"JONQUILS" and the artist are a pretty pair. 10-year-old Elza Antunes, a Brazilian-born artist, is one of 10 Chevy Chase Junior Studio painters whose work is now on exhibit at the United Nations Club gallery. Elza's "Spring" is one of four paintings chosen for a collection of children's art sent to France by the American Association of University Women. Elza drew a pixie after she found out what one was. She'd never met one in Brazil.

WORK of ART

SOMETIMES artists themselves are works of art.

Ten little girls from the Chevy Chase Junior Studio looked like a pastel by Degas, as they sat primly in straight-backed chairs, patting their organdy skirts at the opening of their show Monday at the United Nations Club gallery. It was an awesome experience, being "hung" in an exhibit, and they were tasting the dignity of the occasion.

They are not easy to impress. Four of them have already had pictures sent to France in an exhibit for French school children which the American Association of University Women prepared. That puzzled them. They didn't understand how their work was of interest to anybody else since they are stern self-critics. But seeing the paintings hung here at the big gallery they were solemn.

Normally they are a group of chattering, shrieking artists, bespattered with tempera paint, who take pride in the fact that this 10 alone make more noise than the 73 students their teacher, Mrs. David Lichtenstein, once had in Baltimore.

The group, ranging in age from 9 to 12, lives in Chevy Chase. They started painting in someone's back yard last spring and have progressed artily, to an attic.

The technique of painting is not taught formally. Mrs. Lichtenstein, who was formerly in the education department at the Baltimore Museum of Art, believes only in helping them get their ideas down. "To see life through a child's eyes is a rich and rewarding experience," she explains. "There is such honesty and clearness of vision."

—SONIA STEIN.

Ever try Date Cookies made Mrs. Fries' way?

1 lb. chopped pitted dates
1 cup softened shortening
2 cups firmly packed Franklin Old Fashioned Brown Sugar
2 eggs
3 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon cream of tartar
½ teaspoon salt
2 cups rolled oats

Combine 1 lb. chopped pitted dates, 1 cup firmly packed Franklin Old Fashioned Brown Sugar, and ½ cup water. Place in double boiler; steam 45 minutes. Cool. Beat well before spreading between cookies. Cream together 1 cup shortening and 1 cup firmly packed Franklin Old Fashioned Brown Sugar. Add 2 eggs, 1 at a time, beating after each. Sift together 3 cups sifted all-purpose flour, 1 teaspoon baking soda, 1 teaspoon cream of tartar and ½ teaspoon salt.

Add flour mixture to shortening mixture; add 2 cups rolled oats. Roll out on lightly floured board to ⅛" thickness; cut with round cookie cutter. Spread date filling between each 2 cookies. Press edges together with tines of fork. Place on greased baking sheet. Bake in moderate oven, 350°F., 20 minutes. Yields 27 cookies. Mrs. John G. Fries of Youngstown, Ohio, says these date-filled cookies are favorites with everyone! And for all her baking, Mrs. Fries uses Franklin Pure Cane Sugar, to get:

Federation Head Sends Word to Korean Women

WOMEN CLUB members are shocked by the news of the invasion of South Korea, Mrs. Hiram Cole Houghton, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, said in a Voice of America radio program Monday.

The statement read: "Messages already received from clubwomen lead me to believe that the millions of members of the General Federation of Women's Clubs extending into 35 countries of the world are shocked by news of the invasion of South Korea.

"Our deepest sympathy goes to the citizens of this free republic and especially to the women, many of whom are affiliated with the General Federation. Thousands of clubwomen in the United States have been corresponding and sending needed supplies regularly to women of the Korean Republic. We think of these women as real friends."

Gold Star Mothers

At the convention of the National Gold Star Mothers, Inc., at Atlantic City, N. J., over the past weekend six Washington women were elected to national offices.

Mrs. Ruth W. Barnes was elected national vice president; Mrs. Eunice Jordon King, treasurer; Mrs. Josephine Sanche, historian; Mrs. Violet Virginia Bladen, color bearer; Mrs. Marion Wolf, president's aide, and Mrs. Hazel Hamilton Williams, memorial chairman. They are members of the Capital Chapter of the society.

The new national president is Mrs. Evangeline Trenchard of Ardsley, Pa. All members of the society lost children in the service.

Your Baby

Milk Not Just A Beverage; It's Real Food

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

IT IS commonplace for a parent to consider milk a beverage and not a food. She offers a bottle with the same aplomb as if she were presenting the baby a glass of water. She knows this isn't a drink minus nutrition, but she treats it as such when she offers it between meals.

During early infancy the child's whole nutrition comes from its formula or breast feeding. By the sixth week, if not before, additional foods will be added to the diet and it is when the additional foods reach the point of satisfying the baby at any one meal, that the mother begins to treat the milk as a drink and not as a food.

Over and over mothers tell me how they feed their babies and how they are responding to it. And often the one thing that is wrong in the whole situation is that the mothers are feeding the children three times a day with food and "watering" them three other times a day with bottles of milk. The milk is given an hour or two hours after the meal as if it had no significance as a nutritious food and as if the stomach would willingly accept another portion of food to be digested.

The fact is that it does rebel and that is usually the cause of the child's appetitelessness (at the next meal) or the restlessness during sleep.

If the child cannot drink its formula at the end of its meal of solid food, then the portions of solid food are excessive.

If the child cannot eat, once it has partaken of its formula, then something is amiss with the formula, it is too large in quantity, is given too often, or its ingredients are unbalanced.

The disadvantage of giving milk between meals or even an hour after meals is that the child's stomach is kept active and full until the next feeding. When the stomach is still busy with the last meal, there is little hunger and therefore no appetite for the next one.

Milk should be part of each meal. Give the food and milk alternately, if the baby does not want all of the milk at the end of the meal. Be sure the formula is a proper one for age and weight and not too weighted with sugar. But don't feed solid food and then wait an hour or two and give milk, thinking that by so doing you insure the baby will get both food and milk. He will, at one meal, if that meal is properly proportioned.

"I was frankly skeptical!"
says MRS. S. THOMPSON, JR.
4612 Chase Ave., Bethesda

1. "I couldn't believe it—yet I decided to give No-Rinse Surf a try! Of course, on washday, I saved half the time and work it always takes—but I was still skeptical when I hung my clothes out to dry."

2. "Imagine my surprise—everything dried as soft as any wash I ever had with three rinsings, and as white as if I'd soaked those shirts and sheets overnight in bleach! What's more, all my clothes smelled so sweet and clean!"

3. "Mother's set in her ways, but even she was sold when I showed her how beautifully my daughter's little dresses ironed—how clear and crisp the colors looked! No-Rinse Surf will be a family affair from now on!"

See for yourself with No-Rinse Surf—only washday product approved by U. S. Testing Co. for no rinsing!

AMERICA'S LARGEST SELLING SUGARS

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

JEAN RAINEY, one of Washington's young stars, has just opened at the Neptune Room. Her low, expressive voice is not heard because the Neptune Room wishes to avoid the 20 percent tax, but she treats the customers to classical, popular and show tunes on the piano from 3:30 till closing.

With Jean are three young men called the Triads—all under 25 and the enthusiastic, joyful type. Their careers, which have skyrocketed since they teamed up last fall, are just a picnic to them. They polish up their wisecracks between sets, take out their tape measure to check on the size of the stuffed fish on the wall, and amuse themselves in other antic ways.

When the time comes to move on to another MCA-booked engagement, they just pack their organ into their station wagon and their worldly possessions are taken care of.

"The three live within 25 miles of each other in New Jersey. All have worked in trios before. Then last year they decided they could do even better together, and MCA certainly seems to agree.

Their music is lively, with the beat stressed. The organ, accordion and guitar sound good together. They specialize in requests and have seldom been stumped.

Jean Rainey, who also plays whatever people ask, has only been stopped by one: "My Son Calls Somebody Else Papa." But she'll explain quickly that it was a legitimate request; there really is such a song. It's a hillbilly number, for which we'll have to take her word, as she's a North Carolinian herself.

MATT WINDSOR has changed his policy at the Windsor Room. After seven or eight years of running a food and cocktail spot with incidental entertainers in the background, he's going all out for big name attractions.

The policy was begun this week with the Jones Brothers. It was a good choice; the Jones trio has played so much in Washington that followers flocked to hear the boys again on opening night.

As usual, the three brothers, Herb, Clyde and Max, outdid themselves with rhythmic and vocal gymnastics. They play any type music, and all three play each of the three instruments—the vibraphone, piano and tom-tom. They'll be on hand till late in July, when they must start rehearsal on a play in New York.

The Windsor Room is also redecorated. It now has thick blue carpets with blue and gray brought out in the walls and lighting. It's open seven nights a week, and music's from 8 p. m. till closing.

Walter Winchell —In New York

Broadway Heartbeat

Celebs About Town: Edna Ferber, the "Show Boat" (and other best-sellers) author, putting on her fur jacket before entering an air-conditioned movie cathedral . . . Mme. Vijaya Pandit, Ambassador from India, completely oblivious to the 90 degree humidity as she strolls along Madison ave. in her flowing native garb . . . Giuseppe DiMaggio, startling Stork Clubmen with the sudden gray in his hair . . . Sumner Welles, just back from Yurrop, ignoring the headlines—for his pet spot—The Blue Angel . . . Ty Power, who has completed rehearsals of "Mr. Roberts," which he will do in London. He carries Linda's latest photos (she's in Rome), which he offers with quotes: "Isn't she lovely?" . . . Jane Pickens giving her sex an idea how a lady acts off stage. Dignified, Chomming and All-Girl.

Sallies in Our Alley: They were discussing the Korean invasion. "It's a terrible thing," sighed an anti-New Dealer, "to look forward to another war" . . . "Especially," snapped Henny Youngman, "with no Roosevelt to blame it on" . . . At Chandler's someone wondered what you have to be to become a member of the Social Register . . . "Very dull," was the retort.

New York Story: The Police Dept. will tell you this happened . . . Several years ago a group of police officials, cops and detectives toured Sing Sing Prison . . . The end of the tour was the execution chamber, where they were invited to sit in The Chair . . . All refused, except a cop named Graham . . . "I'd like to see what it feels like," he nonchalanted . . . Back here on duty, he was assigned to guard a payroll attendant . . . One night the guard was found slain under a Bronx tunnel bridge . . . Exactly 5 years to the day when cop Graham clowned in The Hot Squat—he died in it.

Memos of a Midnighter: F. Sinatra and Co. were refused permish to entertain troops abroad because of the Korean matter . . . The big secret romance in M. Berle's life is Anita Roddy-Eden, who auth'd the thriller book, "Double Exposure" . . . Wouldn't Mutual like to buy the famed Palace Theater for teevy? . . . The two detectives held in that narcotics racket are last-initial'd: D. and W. . . . Admiral Kimmel (blamed for Pearl Harbor) is readying a book giving his side of it . . . The Ambassador of Siam (Prince W. Waithayakon) and a party of 8 will represent the King of Thailand (one of the songsmiths) at the "Peep Show" premiere tonight . . . Fame Is Like This: June Thompson, chosen "Miss NBC" only a month ago, is no longer with that network.

Chorus Rehearsal:
I love to watch the coryphees
Making with the dimpled knees;
Stepping patterns on the floor
To a Tin-Pan Alley score.
How I love those graceful elves,
Counting grimly to themselves;
Sans the makeup and the light—
Even then—they're sheer delight.
—T. Weatherly

Broadway Smalltalk: James Montgomery Flagg, the famed illustrator, is out of the hosp. after a long illness . . . At the opening of "Peep Show" tonight seven larks will sing the lyrics (from the orchestra pit) during the overture . . . Ronnie Gilbert, the gal with The Weavers, married at Mt. Sinai medico Sunday . . . Robert Merrill, signed for the Met, chokes traffic back stage at the Roxy rehearsing arias . . . Noble Sissle has asked the Feds to stop his ex-wife Ethel from sailing. He alleges she has taken their tots . . . The movie stars who got from $150,000 to $300,000 for a film will be probed by income tax agents. They suspect something fishy about getting that much—and then putting themselves down for $2000 just because they're a corporation . . . Washington men are here to see a fight champ about $25,000 in arrears . . . Overheard at Tavern-on-the-Green: "I've just come from a knocktail party."

FBI Melodrama: This is the Inside on how Mr. Whiskers got the goods on Harry Bridges . . . A former Communist pal of Bridges—named Rathburn—refused to testify against him . . . His was The Big Evidence needed . . . He snubbed the pleas of the Gov't men, and then chief prosecutor F. J. Donahue was called in . . . Donahue went to Rathburn's house to talk to him—but he wouldn't "sing" . . . As the Gov't man was leaving Rathburn's home he met the Commy's little son, age 10. Donahue talked baseball with him . . . "I'd give anything to get a baseball signed by Joe DiMaggio!" he exclaimed . . . Donahue phoned Clark Griffith (owner of the Washington team) from San Francisco asking how he could contact DiMag . . . Griffith said he'd call him . . . That night DiMaggio autographed a ball and rushed it to LaGuardia Airport . . . It was in the kid's hands the next morning . . . It was this little touch that persuaded Mervyn Rathburn to testify for Uncle Sam . . . Harry Bridges was convicted, deprived of his United States citizenship—and is now fighting deportation.

Curtain Calls: "Satchmo" Armstrong's music-magic at Bop City . . . Patti Page's platter of "I Don't Care If the Sun Don't Shine" . . . The 3 Suns' version of "Gone Fishin'" . . . The Kirby Stone Five's disc, "Arithmetic" . . . Tony Bennett's recording of "Boulevard of Broken Dreams." Bob Hope's crooning find . . . Alan Dale's teevy show, very videokay . . . Zanuck's next click: "No Way Out."

The Late Watch: The specs report that "Gents Prefer Blondes" is a hotter ticket than ever . . . Jane Cowl's remains still await burial. They are trying to find where she bought a plot. Quintuplets Born In New Orleans; All Die in 4 Hours

New Orleans, June 27 (AP).—Quintuplets, four boys and a girl, were born to a 28-year-old mother here today, but all died within four hours of birth.

The mother was Alberta Allen of Whitecastle, La. The quints were born at Charity Hospital between 7:15 a. m. and 8 a. m. (CST) at intervals of about 10 minutes. Ranging in weight from 1¼ to 1½ pounds, and three months premature, they were placed in incubators.

When the mother entered the hospital's clinic yesterday her pregnancy was diagnosed as triplets. She did not know she was the mother of quintuplets because she was heavily drugged. She has three other children, between 3 and 5 years old.

Lausche Harms Self, CIO-PAC Chief Says

Cleveland, Ohio, June 27 (U.P.)—Jack Kroll, national director of the CIO's Political Action Committee, said today that "CIO members resented tremendously," the recent statement by Gov. Frank Lausche that he had not decided whom to support in the race for United States Senator from Ohio.

"Lausche has done his political career unredeemable hatrm by his statement," Koll told the convention of the CIO Communications Workers of America here.

Let Freedom Ring

U. S. Freedom of Choice Is Lauded

With Independence Day just around the corner, The Washington Post gives its readers some reasons for celebrating the holiday.

The reasons come from an American correspondent who rediscovered his own country after spending five years in 14 European lands and in the Near East. This is the third of six articles on the theme "Let Freedom Ring."

By George Herald

CHAPTER III

It is the right of the people to institute . . . government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such a form as to effect their safety and happiness. The Declaration of Independence.

"How do you want it, Madam? On toast, rye, whole wheat or roll?

This standard luncheonette query made my French wife slightly dizzy during her first days in America. She looked even more flabbergasted when she came home from her first stroll through a supermarket.

"Imagine! I counted 18 different types of bread on the shelves," she exclaimed. "Eighteen kinds! I know some people in Europe who would be glad to have the choice of one!"

Our most precious freedom, which I have overlooked for a good many years, is our freedom of choice.

Whether you earn $25 or $500 a week, you can always choose between an infinite variety of goods in all price ranges—clothes, shoes, hats, gadgets, cars, buses, trains, planes, books, newspapers, magazines, lectures, ball games, concerts, movies or comic strips.

"But that's not a virtue, it's an accident," an envious German once told me. "You just happened to have plenty of elbow room and great resources in your country."

A good answer is another question: "How about Russia, China or some South American nations? They all cover immense spaces, they're full of undeveloped riches, yet none of them has so far been able to offer its citizens as many choices as the United States.

People Key to Wealth

I am convinced by my observations abroad that what makes a country's life abundant is not its natural wealth but what its people do with it. On one of my trips through Eastern Germany I visited the Soviet Post Exchange in Newu-Strelitz. All available articles were uniform.

For instance, there was no choice of perfumes except for three different bottles labeled A, B and C.

Apparently the Kremlin had felt it might lead to disturbances, if all Soviet ladies wore the same scent. So the Commissary for Beauty Products had chosen three party-approved fragrances for them. And only the wives of high-ranking officers and civilians were privileged to make a choice of the three bottles. Any common soldier's bride would have faced disciplinary action if she had smelled like A, B or C!

My years in Europe have convinced me that government-planning will never create a genuine variety of goods for all the people. Such diversity can grow only from the enterprise and pioneer spirit of individuals competing with each other in a free society. Your freedom of choice of cigarettes or soft drinks in the corner drugstore is inseparable from your freedom to pick a job, a mate or a political candidate.

One night in Paris, I was tired of listening to a certain radio show. "Let's switch to another program," I suggested.

But there was no other program. All broadcasters were working for the government.

So were the railroads and airlines. Yet people could at least use them freely. But as I travelled farther East, the choices grew narrower and the use of them became more limited.

The Czechs could not travel from one town to another in their own country without a special government pass. The Hungarians were forbidden to change their apartments, their employers or their minds without getting "permission."

Their one freedom of choice was between keeping quiet and being sent to the nearest concentration camp.

'Operation Shipwreck'

Communist leader Endre Hevesi tried to explain to me why it had to be that way in Czechoslovakia.

"Ever been adrift in a lifeboat?" he asked. The shipwrecked passengers are put on rations, the captain in command tolerates no backtalk, isn't that right?"

I don't know how valid that comparison might have been, but I know one thing:

Anyone who really believes this Operation Shipwreck is a better and more desirable way of running a country than our system must either be balmy or he is acting in bad faith.

How well the Reds' top bracket is aware of this was brought home to us one day in Berlin. We had just completed a tour through the Soviet zone and, to make a nice gesture, we invited our two Russian conducting officers to a turkey dinner at the U. S. Press Club. They thanked us and promised to be there at 8 o'clock.

When they hadn't arrived at a quarter of nine, we phoned but couldn't reach them. 9:30: no Russians. 10 p. m.: no Russians. We finally sat down and ate the bird without them. They never showed up. They never even called.

A few days later we learned through the grapevine what had happened. At the mere mention of our invitation, the two poor fellows had been put under house arrest for a week to keep them from further temptation!

However, if the Reds don't let their people come over and see for themselves, no one here stops our Commies and assorted pinks from going and living in Russia if they like it better there. Strangely enough, most of them have so far preferred the fleshpots of America to a cozy little cottage on the Volga.

I suppose they are exercising their freedom of choice!

No Jokes, Son

Sid Caesar Distills New Kind of Humor

By Saul Pett

NEW YORK (AP).—Spend some time with Sid Caesar and you'll find that words are only a poor substitute for motion and sound.

On stage or off, the new comedy star of television uses words only for continuity, if at all. He talks, for example, about how he likes to watch Buddy Young run back a punt. He makes a flute-like sound, his eyes dance crazily and he emits a "ping." This could only be a touchdown after some neat broken field running.

Sid Caesar

He talks about a Van Gogh exhibit and sucks in his breath and glazes his eyes with the remembered wonder of the color.

Once a Doorman

AT 27, only a few years from his first job on Broadway as a doorman, Sid Caesar is successful and complicated. His pantomime, monologues and sketches have brought him great praise, a yearly income approaching $100,000, two Cadillacs, long cigars, a gun collection worth $10,000, and all the celery tonic and seltzer he can drink.

He has been called the freshest new comic in any medium. He has been compared with Chaplin. Variety, the show business weekly, which is careful with its compliments, cited him for his "extraordinary comedic flair for probing into the foibles and frailties of manner and mores and translating them into delightful satiric vignettes."

His comedy range is wide. He does a 6-month-old baby complaining of adult stupidity. He acts the story of a penny gum machine which gets beaten up, sours on the world and becomes a quarter slot machine. He acts the story of a white wall tire, from its first days on the assembly line, to its great days serving the Stork Club set, to its last days as a tree swing for small boys. In pantomime, he goes through all the tortures of a man teaching his wife to drive.

All His Own Teeth

CAESAR is a half-inch taller than 6 feet, weighs 200 and has the massive shoulders and trim waist of a weightlifter. He is brown haired, brown eyed and, despite two picture assignments in Hollywood, has his own teeth, which are good.

He relaxed in his dressing room with a glass of celery tonic diluted with seltzer and talked about his boyhood in Yonkers, N. Y.

It was at a Catskill hotel that Caesar met his wife. They have one child now, 3-year-old Michele Andrea.

"It seems like I was always studying," he said. "Saxophone lessons and Hebrew lessons for my confirmation and regular school. Also, I was always running away."

"We live in a 5-room apartment in Forest Hills," he said. "Nothing pretentious. The rent is only $175 a month. That's small compared to what we paid in Manhattan.

"I tell you, you can go nuts from too much money, too. Everybody is slapping your back.

"Everybody pulling at you, everybody on the bandwagon now. You got to keep your head."

'You Got to Pay Attention'

THE conversation turned to Caesar's brand of comedy. Various people recalled how good he was in "Make Mine Manhattan" on Broadway, on his television show and his theater appearance.

"I can't tell jokes, bang, bang, bang, bang. I'm no good for night clubs. You got to pay attention if you're going to enjoy my act. You can't listen with one ear all the time you're wondering how much the dame next to you can drink.

"So, no jokes. I let the people work. A millionaire born with a yacht in his mouth can't enjoy it. Same with people watching a comic. They have to be made to work, to think it out in their own minds.

"But don't hit them on the head. Always put some warmth in it. Be gentle. Give them a chance to breathe. Don't try to be too much. If you're good, they'll pick you out."

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

We Enjoy Politics, But Not Politicians

The other day I ventured the opinion that Governor Lausche of Ohio probably caused shivers to run up and down the spines of politicians with his hint that he might vote for the better candidate, rather than the one indorsed by his party. C. E. Stenberg of 217 Willow ave., Takoma Park, Md., snaps:

"There were no mass shivers. Most politicians don't have spines."

THIS IS WASHINGTON

There was quite a crowd around the cigar counter, but nobody was being waited on. The customers were impatient. The clerk looked disgusted.

I finally got up close enough to find out what the trouble was.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

It's odd that anybody should have to pay 3 cents for the mailing of a picnic permit. I've gone to 3149 16th st. nw. many times and had the permit handed me—and once when they were very busy they offered to mail the permit. There has never been any question about paying postage.

They do ask that each permit request be in a separate envelope—surely a small thing to ease the burden of the charming ladies who forego their Saturdays off so that we citizens may enjoy a Saturday or Sunday picnic.

In this city of "everything closed on Saturday," it is indeed a labor of love these folks are doing. And they really know Rock Creek Park.

Would that many of those who use the groves would love them as much, and leave them clean and free of refuse and broken glass.

H. G. Kantor
1339 Shepherd st. nw.

Dear Mr. Kantor:

You can learn an awful lot about the character and early training of people by observing how they use—or abuse—public facilities.

We're extremely fortunate to have Rock Creek Park and all the other recreational areas that have been provided for District Liners. Surely we should have the decency and good sense to use these park lands as befits good neighbors, rather than barbaric nomads.

Bill.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Very affectionate, housebroken kitten." (North 8588 after 10 a. m.)

"Three 2-month-old kittens; they've had their distemper shots." (Michigan 0003 after 7 p. m.)

"Gentle mother cat and two lovely babies, too young to be separated." (North 7697.)

THE NEWS HAS LEAKED OUT

My prize phone call of the month started with the caller asking: "Is it true that you occasionally try to find homes for pets?"

PERSONAL NOTES

Ruth M. Ross, 3140 Wisconsin ave. nw.: A good poem, but far too long for our limited space. How about a snappy four-liner?

VAGRANT THOUGHT

Jim Wilfong, jr., of 1541 Montana ave. ne., wonders why there's no 79 K st. nw. There's a 77 and an 81—with no break between them.

GROWING PAINS

Overheard by Mary Ellen: "Aw, my Mother is nuts for culture so now I gotta learn French off a record."

ADD DEFINITIONS

Stephen Rose of 1403 Newton st. ne. tops Bob Benchley's definition of golf by offering this one:

"Golf is a game in which a ball about 1 inch in diameter is placed on another ball 8000 miles in diameter, the object being to hit the small ball with a stick without touching the large one."

No divots, eh?

ADD SIGNS

Mrs. R. Horton of Route 4, Alexandria, Va., furnishes evidence that the old-style general store is not yet extinct. Down Marlboro way there's an emporium with a sign that offers:

Ice Cold Beer
Wine Whisky
Dry Cleaning
Shoe Repair

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Campaign of Brotherhood Urged

By Drew Pearson

Oskaloosa, Iowa.—I have been visiting out here in the Middle West away from the bureaucrats, the McCarthyites and the wire-tappers, where I had the honor of helping dedicate the great lighting system that illuminates the granite faces of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Teddy Roosevelt on Mount Rushmore.

Pearson

Thinking about these heroes and what they would have done in this present age of fear, I couldn't help wondering whether we today are exercising all the pioneering resourcefulness that they showed in founding this country.

I couldn't help thinking that maybe the present generation is too soft, too content to rely on modern inventions and mechanical miracles. What would we have done with a great wilderness to conquer? Would we have had the courage, the perseverance that they did?

Today we face the same kind of political wilderness behind the Iron Curtain and some of us seem content merely to worry about our personal problems while the world balances on a razor's edge between salvation and ruin.

We have become great specialists in material things. We can build any weapon, a rocket plane carrying us to another continent, perhaps to another planet. But we do not seem able to build permanent peace.

When George Washington went to New York for the first inaugural, it took him 14 days from Mount Vernon. Now it takes one hour by plane, while in 14 days we can fly twice around the world. So the world today is one world in scientific fact, and we must begin to think of it as such in political fact.

I do not care whether we call it a Federal World Union, or United World Federalists, or a World Constitution. But I am sure that if Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln were alive today, they would throw their great pioneering spirit into working for new goals.

When they first wrote our Constitution, the skeptics told them that a Federal union was impossible. The colonies were miles apart, not only in distance, but in language, in customs, and in creeds. All they had was a common need for survival.

But Washington and Jefferson overcame those obstacles to form a Federal Constitution that has become the greatest in the world.

Five years ago when I went to San Francisco to watch the diplomats from the United Nations, we thought we were taking a great step forward. But at that time, we did not know about the atomic bomb. And today, the United Nations, bogged down by vetoes, paralyzed in this age of fear, is just as out of date as the cavalry and infantry of Washington's Army.

The present generation has one great thing in common with the founding fathers—an urgent need for survival. And just as they fought to establish American democracy, we have got to fight to establish a world democracy—world brotherhood.

Actually we are battling against an idea—the phony idea of communism. But Teddy Roosevelt would be ashamed of the fight we are making. We, in many areas, are letting Russia win the battle of creeds, without even giving our own creed a good display in a big show window. We are supposed to be the world's best salesmen. We've sold iceboxes to Eskimos, sun lamps to Hottentots. Yet we, a Nation of crack salesmen, have partly let the Communists outsell us.

Faced with this situation, I doubt if Washington or Jefferson would rely solely on arms and things material. They would put all their pioneering resourcefulness, which conquered the wilderness, repelled foreign invaders and amalgamated 13 widely separated colonies, into ending this age of fear.

Jefferson would probably write a "Bill of Rights" for the world. Washington, despite his "Farewell Message," would begin to get behind the Iron Curtain with the ideals and ideas necessary to a lasting peace. Lincoln and Teddy Roosevelt would make a bold attempt to bring about a change, even if they risked failure. For each knew that it was possible to accomplish the impossible.

So we've got to revise our thinking and realize that democracy was a great gift handed to us at a great price. We have got to work just as hard to preserve it as Washington or Jefferson worked to establish it. Washington sacrificed a life of luxury for an ideal; Jefferson and Lincoln welcomed revolutionary thinking. And if the physicists have made this one world in scientific fact, it is up to us to make it one world in political fact.
